CARTER SEEMS DUE TO WIN ON FIRST BALLOT; FORD AND REAGAN FACING A SIX-WEEK FIGHT

Accepts Arabs' Role in Lebanon Peacekeeping

CLARITY
By JAMES M. MARKHAM
Special to The New York Times
BEIRUT, Lebanon, Thursday, June 10—After meeting stiff resistance, Syrian armor was reported halted yesterday in the mountains east of Beirut and outside the port of Sidon to the south.
The Beirut radio, controlled by the Lebanese leftist-Moslem alliance that is opposing the Syrians with Palestinian help, said yesterday morning that Syria had agreed to a cease-fire.
But the Moslem neighborhoods of Beirut came under intense artillery, rocket and mortar fire for several hours soon after, and fighting was reported from the northern port of Tripoli, where the Syrians' position was said to be fairly strong.
Negotiations for a cease-fire were reported being conducted by two Arab mediators—the Libyan Prime Minister, Maj. Abdel Salam Jalloud, and the Algerian Education Minister, Abdel Karim Ben Mahmoud. They arrived yesterday but were trapped overnight at the airport by shell-

BEAME, IN ATTACK ON STATE, RESISTS SOME BUDGET CUTS

Says City Has Not Received 'One Cent' in Extra Aid, Despite State 'Windfall'
By FRANCIS X. CLINES
In his strongest complaint yet about Governor Carey's fiscal prodding, Mayor Beame yesterday vowed to resist the Governor's pressure for additional budget cuts designed "merely to permit the state to avoid its responsibilities."
Sharpening his differences with his fellow Democrat, the Mayor accused the state of mandating an "unequal partnership" on the city during the fiscal crisis and allowing it little more than the power to tax its residents more heavily.
Meanwhile New York City's school authorities were calculating that the city's school system might suffer an unexpected loss of $20 million in state aid next year because of last fall's five-day strike by teachers. [Page 74.]
Peter C. Goldmark Jr., the State Budget Director, denied Mr. Beame's basic contention that the state had collected a windfall.
The Mayor insisted that as the city was forced to cut its budget, the state realized "windfall" savings in matching aid at the city's expense and that the Governor and Legislature should return some of this money to the city in City University.
"It may come as a shock to some of you, but the State of New York has not given the City of New York one cent in additional aid over existing formulas to meet the city's

Humphrey Stays Out—Wallace, Jackson, Daley Give Support

By R. W. APPLE JR.
Opposition to Jimmy Carter's candidacy for the Democratic Presidential nomination crumbled yesterday, and he appeared to be assured of victory on the first ballot next month.
Capping one of the most brilliantly plotted nomination drives in American political history, the 51-year-old former Governor of Georgia won endorsements yesterday from Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago and Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, plus a promise of support from Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington.
The three party leaders control or influence enough delegates to give Mr. Carter the final votes that he needed for a clear convention majority.
Statement by Kennedy
"I expect the nominee will be Mr. Carter," said Senator Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, to whom many anti-Carter Democrats had looked for help in stopping the Georgian.
Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, who had been prepared to start an active drive for convention delegates this week in the event of failure by Mr. Carter in Tuesday's three final primaries, said in a statement yesterday that he would not do so.
"The primaries now are over and Governor Carter has a commanding lead," said the 65-year-old former Vice President, who has sought his party's Presidential nomination three times. "He is virtually certain to be our party's nominee."
G.O.P. Outcome in Doubt
President Ford and Ronald Reagan, meanwhile, prepared for a six-week battle through 11 state conventions with the Republican nomination still in doubt. Having won Tuesday in Ohio and New Jersey and lost a 105-delegate lead and seemed to occupy the stronger bargaining position.
Melvin R. Laird, re-emerging as a Ford strategist, told reporters in Washington that "it's all over," with the President assured of nomination. Mr. Ford himself commented late in the afternoon that his "electability" would put him across.
But John P. Sears 3d, Mr. Reagan's national campaign manager, said the Californian's nomination was "inevitable." As Mr. Reagan repaired to his ranch hideaway above Santa

Suggests Alcoholic, Can Drink Safely

A Blue Cross Step
By LAWRENCE K. ALTMAN
The Blue Cross Association announced yesterday that it had taken the first step toward extending full coverage to its subscribers for comprehensive, nonhospital treatment of alcoholism, a major cause of public health problems that afflicts an estimated nine million Americans.
Blue Cross officials said they had contracted with the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism a Federal agency, to undertake a study to determine whether comprehensive treatment would, among other things, reduce tardiness and absenteeism at work and prevent potentially fatal damage to the liver, brain and other organs in enough individuals to make broad coverage worthwhile.
"Our hope is that we could begin to prevent many of the complications that we pay for through in-hospital coverage," the Blue Cross president, Walter J. McNerney, said in an interview.
Of the 70 Blue Cross plans across the country, 61 now provide some hospital coverage for

Blumenthal to Quit State Legislature; Decision a Surprise

By LINDA GREENHOUSE
Special to The New York Times
ALBANY, June 9—Albert H. Blumenthal, the Assembly majority leader, said today that, to spend more time with his family, he would retire from the Assembly this fall at the end of his seventh term.
The announcement by the 47-year-old Manhattan Democrat, one of the early leaders in the West Side reform movement and among the Capitol's most popular and respected legislators, took all but his closest colleagues by surprise.
Mr. Blumenthal received a prolonged standing ovation from members of both parties when the Assembly convened this afternoon, and Governor Carey made a surprise appearance on the Speaker's rostrum.
"I hail this man for his great contribution," the Governor said. "His name and his family."

CARTER RETICENT ON RUNNING MATE

Says He Won't Tell Aides of Family Whom He Likes—Discourages Guessing
By CHARLES MOHR
Special to The New York Times
PLAINS, Ga., June 9—Jimmy Carter, now virtually sure of the Democratic Presidential nomination, made a vigorous effort today to discourage speculation about his possible choice of a Vice-Presidential running mate.
He said that he would not inform even his family or closest associates of his thinking on the subject or permit them to speak for him.
But, as political dams broke around the country, bringing a flood of new delegates to the already delegate-rich Mr. Carter, attention began to shift from a Presidential race that most people now believe is settled to the Vice-Presidential nomination. The speculation that Mr. Carter hopes to avoid will probably increase.
In the political world, attention is focusing on several figures, including Senator Frank Church of Idaho, Senator Adlai E. Stevenson 3d of Illinois and Senator Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota, Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington indicated yesterday that he was interested, and Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona said long ago that he would not refuse a Vice-Presidential offer.
Mr. Carter said previously that he had been studying a list of two dozen names. Hamilton Jordan, his 31-year-old campaign manager, said today that the list included some women and blacks. But Mr. Carter has been careful throughout his long campaign to avoid even a single public expression of special interest in any individual.
The former Georgia Governor said today at a news conference at the old railroad station that is his headquarters in this South Georgia hamlet of 683 population, "There's going to be a lot of speculation, obviously,"

Defection to Carter In G.O.P. Is Hinted

into national scale by November, indicate that, unless the Republican Party can patch up its internal differences, it may well suffer its largest defection in recent history—even greater than that in 1964, when 20 percent of the nation's Republicans voted for President Johnson, the Democratic nominee, rather than for Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, the Republican candidate.
A Sharp Contrast
The 35 percent Republican defection rate contrasted sharply with that among Democrats who opposed Mr. Carter, the former Georgia Governor who is the Democratic front-runner.
On the average, only about 17 percent of those who backed Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona or Senator Frank Church of Idaho said they would desert the party if Mr. Carter won the nomination.
These figures, which are echoed in recent national polls, reflect a stunning reversal of party roles in just four years. At about this time in 1972, a Times survey in California showed that the Democrats were deeply divided over the rising candidate.

Nuclear Power Vote

A California proposal that could have limited nuclear power was defeated by 2 to 1 in yesterday's primary. Utilities that opposed the curbs are optimistic about the future, but the plan's backers vowed to fight on. Page 55.

Thorndike Is Dead; Actress for 7 Decades

By ALBIN KRESS
Thorndike, the actress of the British whose career spanned seven decades and five continents, died yesterday at her home in London, four days after suffering a heart attack. She was 93 years old.
Dame Sybil made her last formal stage appearance at the age of 87, when she starred in "There Was an Old Woman" a play by John Graham that was the inaugural presentation at a theater, named for Dame Sybil in Leatherhead, just outside London.
Soon after, according to a son, John Casson, Dame Sybil's vitality was sapped by arthritis, and deafness set in. However, she made her last public appearance only a few weeks ago, when she went to the closing of her beloved Old Vic Theater, with which she had been associated for many years, prior to the National Theater Company's move to a new home at Waterloo Bridge.
Dame Sybil was an astonishing

James A. Farley, 88, Dies; Ran Roosevelt Campaigns

James A. Farley on his 88th birthday two weeks ago

James A. Farley, a major Democratic Party figure during the New Deal Administration of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and a former Postmaster General, died yesterday in his suite at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. He was 88 years old.
Mr. Farley, who lived alone, was found lying on his bed, dressed as if he were planning to go out, shortly before 7 P.M. by a hotel housekeeper making her rounds, Dr. Eugene Beck, a hotel physician pronounced Mr. Farley dead of cardiac arrest. A priest from nearby St. Patrick's Cathedral was summoned to administer the last sacrament.
Mr. Farley, a stately erect figure who retained an active interest in Democratic Party affairs, had only recently been notified that he was to be named "chairman emeritus" of the Democratic National Convention to be held here next month, according to a party spokesman.
The elderly party patriarch, who had prided himself on having attended every Democratic convention since 1924, had been turned down as a New York delegate to the convention.
Mr. Farley achieved fame as a campaign strategist for Roosevelt, who was first elected in 1932, and served as

Murphy's Law (The Worst Is Likely) Is Bedeviling Searchers at Loch Ness

By JOHN NOBLE WILFORD
Special to The New York Times

DRUMNADROCHIT, SCOTLAND, June 9—The engineers and scientists probing Loch Ness with camera and sonar are encountering more evidence of Murphy than of the famed monster. This is the ubiquitous Murphy's Law, which holds that whatever can go wrong will go wrong.

True to the law, and all the plumbing notwithstanding, a number of mechanical and electrical problems have plagued the first days of the Loch Ness expedition being conducted by the Academy of Applied Science and the New York Times.

Dr. Robert H. Rines, leader of the Loch Ness expedition, views TV image transmitted by underwater camera.

The problems have delayed full and effective operation of the expedition's underwater television monitoring apparatus, but the submerged elapsed-time camera has continued to snap 2,000 to 4,000 pictures a day, hoping to catch a glimpse of creatures said to live in the deep, gloomy waters.

The purpose of the expedition is to establish the existence and identity of the creatures. No attempt will be made to capture or disturb them.

Camera Rig a Problem

One problem was the way the camera rigs were suspended from the Hunter, the 23-foot cabin cruiser moored at the search site in Urquhart Bay. The heavier television rig, lowered from the stern, could not readily be shifted under water or hauled up for inspection and reloading. Dr. Robert H. Rines, the expedition leader, conceded that the weight of the rig under water had been underestimated.

A couple of villagers came to the rescue. Tony Gerlings, a tall Dutchman who lives here and operates vacation cottages, suggested a new rigging with better leverage for maneuvering, and Gordon Menzies took the necessary metal crossbars to his machine shop for modification.

Mr. Menzies, the expedition's "landlord," owns the land around Temple Pier and the cottage that is serving as the television monitoring center, and photographic darkroom.

Like many local people, he has been eager to assist the search. When the 10-foot steel frame holding the cameras was pulled out of the loch, water was displaced in a strobe light. One of the high-intensity flashing lights used to illuminate the water. The lamp was replaced, batteries were changed and the entire cylinder was revealed.

The light worked perfectly during tests last night.

Another problem proved more intractable. Moisture had seeped into the cylinder containing the Polaroid camera. In addition, the mechanism for triggering the camera's flash unit was not working.

"Back to Drawing Board"

"Back to the drawing board," remarked Dr. Harold E. Edgerton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the scientific photographic specialist, whose patience in the face of Murphy's challenges seems endless. But after an hour of "playing with the plugs," Dr. Edgerton still could not correct the malfunction.

The expedition is experimenting with several depths from 20 to 35 feet for the loch is about 60 feet deep at the site, and sunlight penetrates only 20 or 25 feet. The rig with the television cameras and lights is submerged so that it is about 20 feet from and in viewing range of the elapsed-time camera on the television screen. If a creature should come into view or anything unusual happen, the observer pushes buttons to take more detailed pictures with the stereoscopic cameras.

The television monitoring apparatus, particularly the video tape unit, has also had problems, largely because of the difference in electric current between Britain and the United States. The American-made equipment was designed to operate on 115 volts at 60 cycles, but the British current is 230 volts at 50 cycles.

System Didn't Work

Before the engineers left Boston they devised a system they hoped would compensate for the difference between cycles. The television would operate on twin batteries that could be recharged by British current. The batteries and a system of inverters were to filter out flickering.

The plan made in Boston did not work at Loch Ness. Though the live television picture was relatively undisturbed, videotape replays were jumbled, as TV pictures are disturbed by airplanes.

Bolivia Declares State of Siege To Balk Widespread Unrest

LA PAZ, Bolivia, June 9 (AP)—A state of siege was declared throughout Bolivia today to deal with a series of strikes and student demonstrations that began last week.

The decree was announced after an extraordinary Cabinet meeting called by President Hugo Banzer Suarez early in the day. Javier Arce, the President's press secretary, said the state of siege was declared to "clear up an atmosphere of subversion prevailing in the country."

The Federation of Mine Workers said its director, Victor Lopez Arias, and other union leaders were arrested early today.

Student demonstrations and strikes by miners broke out after General Banzer's right-of-center Government refused to permit the body of

Gen. Juan Jose Torres, a former Bolivian President, who was assassinated last week in Buenos Aires, to be returned to Bolivia.

Even before the state of siege decree was announced, the police and the security agency of the Interior Ministry were mobilized. The armed forces were placed on alert but the army commander, Gen. Raul Alvarez, said military units would intervene only if the situation worsened.

The Ministry of Education ordered early school vacations starting today. It said student demonstrations, in which one student was killed and four were seriously injured in clashes with the police, had been influenced by politicians. The ministry reported student disturbances in La Paz, Cochabamba, Sucre and Oruro.

Because of the problem the expedition suspended operations for the night, at which time several members broke out a bottle of Scotch whisky, a local blend called Monster's Choice.

After sleeping on the television matter, Dr. Rines, using trial-and-error combinations of voltages and currents, solved the problem for all practical purposes.

Syria Reported Putting More Troops Near Lebanon

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN

WASHINGTON, June 9—

Faced with increased opposition to its intervention in Lebanon, Syria was reported today to have moved several thousand more troops up to the Lebanese border.

Diplomatic and intelligence sources here also report that Iraq—bitterly opposed to Syrian moves—has sent army units to its frontier with Syria in an effort to put pressure on Damascus.

The speed of events has caused considerable confusion here. But officials believe the following trends are discernible:

¶The initial Syrian thrusts into Lebanon by 10,000 to 12,000 men have run into unexpectedly sharp military opposition from leftist Lebanese and Palestinian groups. This has forced Syria to prepare for more troops for entry if needed.

¶President Hafez al-Assad of Syria, under considerable Arab criticism for his move into Lebanon to force the leftists and Palestinians to accept a cease-fire, seems eager to show his Government's intentions toward Lebanon are honorable. After long discussions in Damascus, statements were issued accepting a token force from Libya and Algeria to join with Syria in forming a "pan-Arab" force to promote a cease-fire, and maintain Lebanese integrity. Whether such a "pan-Arab" arrangement would be acceptable to all the Lebanese parties was uncertain. The Lebanese Christians, who had favored the Syrian intervention, had earlier criticized an Arab League meeting called in Cairo to discuss the crisis. The Damascus acceptance would seem to indicate that Christian interests would be protected.

¶The big powers continue to play an essentially passive role in the Lebanon crisis. The United States, concerned about the conflict's widening to include either Israel or other Arab states, was silent publicly. But it moved the aircraft carrier America and two escort frigates into the eastern Mediterranean to be available for evacuation and to show American interest.

¶There are 44 ships in the Sixth Fleet, the Pentagon said, while the Russians have 74. Moscow issued a statement urging all parties—and implicitly Syria—to stop interfering in Lebanese affairs.

¶Force Increases Steadily
American officials have watched with apprehension the steady rise of Syrian forces to Lebanon.

The United States has for several months supported Syrian political initiatives to restore order in Lebanon and to establish a government that gives the majority Moslem population additional political rights but that does not destroy Christian-Moslem balance.

The Syrians do not want a radical leftist Lebanon that might align with Iraq. But the United States has been worried that the Syrians would be tempted to risk confrontation with Israel by moving large numbers of troops into Lebanon to force a political solution.

At first, American officials expressed sympathy with the Syrian moves that were made at the urging of Lebanese Christians who feared they would be wiped out. But instead of restoring calm, the Syrian intervention last week stirred up fresh opposition in Lebanon and this led to new military moves in the last two days.

So far, officials here believe, Mr. Assad has shown restraint. They believe he is under pressure to send in heavy reinforcements to rout the Palestinian forces, but has decided to pause and seek a face-saving solution for all sides.

Officials here believe that the Israelis halt Arab protest against Syrian intervention.

NABLUS, Israel-occupied West Bank, June 9 (UPI)—Israeli troops fired tear-gas grenades today to disperse hundreds of teen-age Arabs demonstrating against the Syrian intervention in Lebanon.

The demonstrators unfurled Palestine Liberation Organization flags, barricaded roads, and burned automobile tires. Some shopowners joined the anti-Syrian protest by closing their businesses.

Officials said troops moved in to break up the demonstration after the protesters began stoning Israeli patrols and chanting slogans against the nine-year Israeli occupation of the territory.

The West Bank, captured by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war, is the home of some 650,000 Palestinians.

Workers carry away the bodies of Syrian soldiers killed when their column of armored vehicles was ambushed by leftists in the center of Saïda, Lebanon. The wreckage of a tank is in background.

Shells Halting Drive; Peace Plan Reported

months, the pressure is off the Christian rightists. At night when Beirut is usually darkened by Junieh, the unofficial Christian capital, can be seen winking to the north.

Shells Land in Beirut
A tour of Beirut's western or Moslem neighborhoods yesterday found the streets deserted. In the heavily Palestinian neighborhood of Terk Jdeide, two artillery shells crashed into a complex of apartment buildings, scattering people from the streets.

Shells fired by gunners in the Christian quarters of eastern Beirut landed regularly around the Beirut radio station, which went off the air.

Francis E. Meloy, the newly arrived American Ambassador, said he was "aghast" that 155-millimeter artillery shells had been fired at the nurses' residence of the American University Hospital.

The Ambassador said his military attaché had determined from the trajectory of the shells that they had been fired from Syrian positions.

For the Lebanese Christians, the intervention of the Syrians has been a military blessing. Thrown on the defensive in the later months of the civil war by Lebanese leftists and Moslems, and the Palestinians, the right-wingers can now pummel their old enemies, who face threats on two fronts.

Aside from taking up positions around the Christian town of Zableh, the advancing Syrian armor has made no advances into Christian territory. Palestinian guerrillas clearly fear that the government of President Hafez al-Assad would like to tame their movement in the name of bringing peace to Lebanon.

Outside Beirut, there were reports of fighting yesterday but none of major Syrian advances. One report from the resort town of Bbandun, 12 miles east of here, said it had been heavily shelled during the night.

But Syrian tanks were reported to be dug in at Rouassat Sofar, just above Bbandun on the Beirut-Damascus highway.

Syrians' Control Crossroad
South of Beirut's international airport, Syrian commandos hold the key intersection at Khabde. From there they have spread up one road that leads to the Moslem town of Aramun and down into the Shantytown of Uzai by the beach.

From positions around Aramun, the commandos have been or personnel able to shell western Beirut, but they were not seen making attempts to officers.

The New York Times/June 10, 1976
Syria reportedly halted its drive short of Bbandun and Saïda. Fighting continued at Tripoli.

Israel's Delegate at U.N. Fears Lebanon Spillover

By KATHLEEN TELTSCH
Special to The New York Times

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., June 9—Chaim Herzog, Israel's delegate, said today that the hostilities in Lebanon had developed into a major international conflict between the Arab governments, posing dangers to Israel and to the rest of the Middle East.

"It is a dangerous situation for everybody, a terrifying situation," he declared. "It cannot be localized and must spill over."

At a news conference he criticized the United Nations for taking no action in the 14-month Lebanese conflict. The Security Council opened debate for the sixth time in six months today to conduct its "monthly tirade against Israel," he added.

Although the initial fighting between Christians and Moslem factions in Lebanon has spread, with Syria sending in additional regular troops against the Palestinians, there has been no move here to bring the conflict to the Council.

But diplomatic sources said tonight that an appeal for a cease-fire and for restoration of order was being discussed.

Israel is boycotting the new Security Council debate, called this time to deal with a Palestine Committee report reaffirming the Palestinians' right to independence, demanding that Israel give up by next June 1 all Arab territories occupied since 1967.

TRUCE IN LEBANON URGED BY SOVIET

Statement Assails Foreign Intervention in Conflict

MOSCOW, June 9 (Reuters)

The Soviet Union called today for an end to foreign intervention in the Lebanese war and demanded an immediate cease-fire.

A statement issued by the Government press agency Tass said the Lebanese crisis was easing to an internal matter. An offer by France to send troops and the presence of the United States Sixth Fleet "close to Lebanese shores" demonstrated this, it said.

Without naming any country, the statement went on to say that the Soviet Union was concerned by the Lebanese events as any other nation. It came near to criticizing the attacked foreign powers that it Syrian intervention. The most urgent need in Lebanon is that all sides "in one interference." Syria has repeatedly said its way or another should immediately hold their fire," the bloodshed, the statement continued.

The Soviet Union urges all states to abstain from any action that goes against the principles of respect for independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, so that these generally recognized international principles should be fully implemented in relation to Lebanon also," it said.

Soviet Not Talking Sides The Soviet Union has so far refrained from taking sides in the fighting between Syrian forces and the Palestinian and Lebanese leftist alliance. But in suggesting that the Syrian Army had not succeeded in its declared intention of stopping the fighting, the statement had been drawn into the "fratricidal war." A series of reports appearing in the official Soviet press and by Tass have accused "imperialist forces" of instigating the events in Lebanon. According to one of the reports, the Western powers were "drawing Arabs against Arabs into a fratricidal war." Western countries, principally the United States, have also been accused of attempting to whip up tension by dispatching warships in the direction of Lebanon. None of the reports, including tonight's statement read on So-Warning to CAIRO. Thus The Syrian Arab League, Atassi, commends the Soviet state foreign Lebanon referre perialist' action changed.

In old St. Petersburg, they called summer "the time of the white nights"

And so do they still in Leningrad today. There are some things neither politics nor time can change. The Neva and the canals gleam in a pale northern twilight that lingers on and on. The trees cast no shadows in the silvery silence, and you can almost sense spirits of another age around you.

No wonder the whole fashion world is suddenly fascinated with that bygone era of great passions, of dangerous secrets whispered softly in the dark. It's the new Romantic Rebellion against the Dreary Realism of t-v news and t-v dinners.

We saw the Old Russia look in Paris. And in London, where we captured this cossack collection for you. And because we don't like to do things half way, we also captured its creator for you.

Meet Jeff Banks today. The young, good-looking Englishman whose designs were a smash on the Sceptered Isle this season will be here to chat with you in our Young Expression Shop on three today from 12:30 till 2. We'll have informal modeling so you can get a first-hand look at the look that will be making headlines.

Our sketches here are just a gentle hint of what you'll see. Remember that everything is gauzy, drifty, Wistful White, lit with bright blue and red and green ribbons and Russian ribbon embroidery.

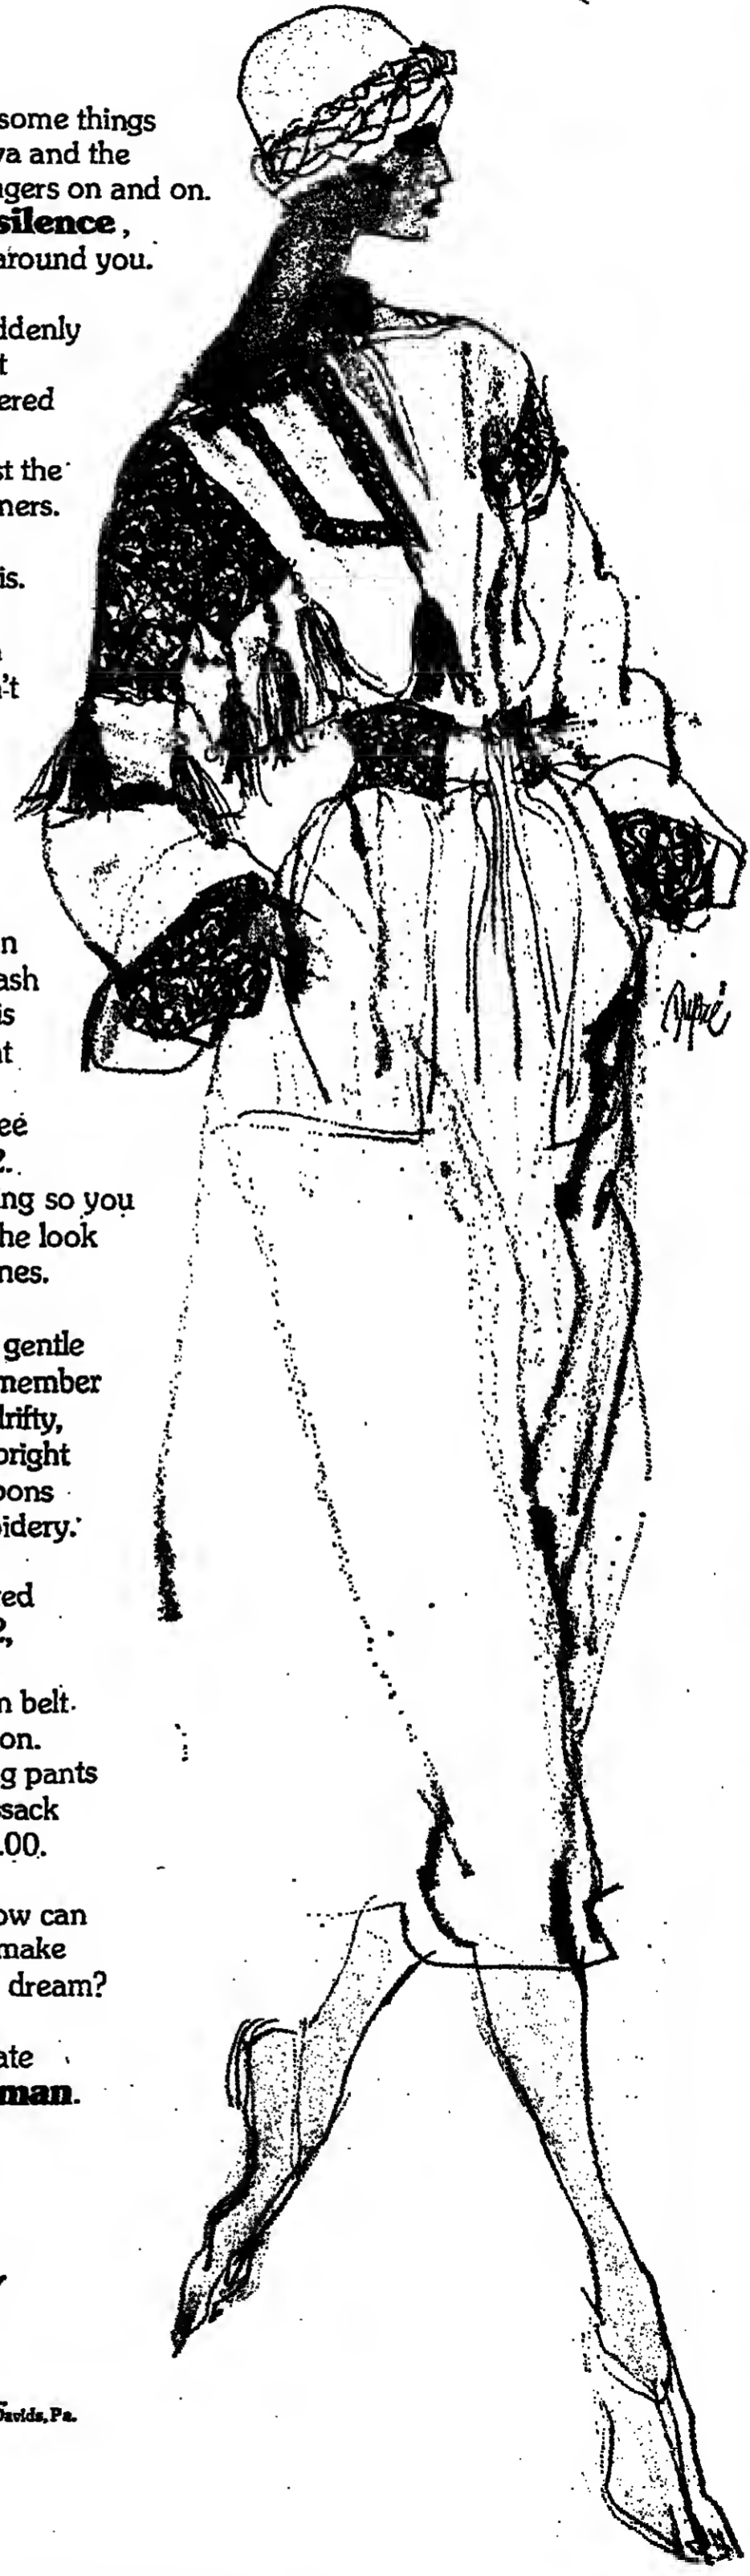

The dress is a softly textured cotton for sizes 8 to 12, $90.00. Our deep-v tunic with wrap-around ribbon belt is white-on-white pure cotton. S.m. and l. at 60.00. Matching pants have elastic waist and cossack ankle-tie. S.m. and l. at 55.00.

Now with your peasant cunning, how can you say Nyet to clothes that will make your own white nights as lovely as a dream?

And don't forget you have a date with a cha-ahming Englishman. Lunch-time today.

Whether Italian Communists Get in the Government or Not, the Outlook Is That Troubles Will Persist

By ALVIN SHUSTER
Special to The New York Times

ROME, June 9—With 11 days to go before the voting, the emerging consensus is that the parliamentary election will solve little and leave Italy in deep difficulty for some time to come. If the Communists do not get into the Cabinet this time there will be trouble, many diplomats and politicians believe. If the Communists do get in, they add, there will be trouble.

Accordingly, Italians are hardly in a hopeful mood as the polling of June 20 and 21 approaches. They realize that this will be the most important election since 1949, when the Christian Democrats emerged to dominate political life, but they are not convinced that the outcome will be all that decisive.

The conventional wisdom has it that the strength of the Christian Democrats, who won 35 percent in regional and local voting last year, and the Communists, who got 33 percent, will remain about the same. If so, Italy would be in for a long period of political paralysis that would raise questions as to its governability.

In the absence of accurate polls, largely because Italians do not like to tell even pollsters how they intend to vote, predictions are hazardous at best. Even those who espouse the conventional wisdom of basically no change agree that there are undercurrents suggesting that the electorate may have turned volatile.

For years the swing between the major parties has been slight. But the referendum backing divorce in May 1974 showed that old traditions and old patterns were no longer holding. For the public went against the Roman Catholic Church and the Christian Democrats, voting by a 3-to-2 margin in favor of divorce.

The regional and local elections last summer reflected the trend away from predictability. The Communists gained 5 percentage points over their showing in the last national election, in 1972, and gave every sign of developing enough momentum to carry them into the national government.

Enrico Berlinguer, the Communist Party leader, is saying that the Christian Democrats are not finished and may do well in the voting. This may be true, but his comment is part of expected campaign strategy to keep party workers busy and to prevent complacency.

Whatever the motives for Mr. Berlinguer's caution, the Communists remain as unsure of the outcome as everyone else. "In certain people there is a conflict between the need for change and the fear of novelty," Mr. Berlinguer said this week. "In the last analysis, these are the stakes June 20."

The need for change is clear. Despite the Christian Democrats' successes, they have become so faction-ridden that they appear unable to move the machinery of government, to deal with the economy, to prove hospitals and schools, or even to give the country enough small change.

The Fear of Novelty

The fear of novelty, if the Communists represent novelty, is also clear. Without dealing with other issues, apart from pledges to reform, the Christian Democrats are counting almost solely on arousing apprehensions of the Communists and suggesting that, once in, they would never go out.

"There is just no way of sensing how deep this feeling of fear or lack of it runs in Italian society," a diplomat commented, "Italian politicians are sitting on something mysterious. Many voters seem undecided. But many are also fed up with the way things have been going. They want an end to the problems, but unfortunately they won't find it June 20."

Mr. Berlinguer is campaigning on a platform calling for a government of national unity, that would involve all parties in a grand coalition and would yield cabinet seats for the Communists. If they emerge as the largest party in this nation of more than 55 million people, they could soon find themselves unpopular, too.

If the conventional wisdom turns out right—that is, no basic change—then the Christian Democrats will go through an agonizing period trying to farm among businessmen, bankers and outside creditors and lead a new non-Communist coalition with the smaller parties, including the variable Socialists, who will play a crucial role in the eventual solution. It would all be reminiscent of the period when the ruling party was simply unable to govern and form a cabinet.

The hope of the Christian Democrats is that the Communists would settle for less than cabinet seats in a cabinet and would agree to a formal role in shaping policy from outside. In this event, the Communist deputies might be assigned important committee chairmanships in Parliament and, in return for that and other pledges, would cooperate in supporting programs to deal with the economic crisis.

That limited role is the minimum many people expect to emerge. The maximum, at the moment, would appear to be that the Communists would agree to a cabinet and would agree to a formal role in shaping policy from outside. In this event, the Communist deputies might be assigned important committee chairmanships in Parliament and, in return for that and other pledges, would cooperate in supporting programs to deal with the economic crisis.

than 30 percent of the government despite the Communist line again push for power.

In southern Italy a Christian Democracy looked up from the election and talked about providing no answers.

"Many people seem to be going through the motions," he said. "They think June 20 is only a prelude for the election, perhaps in a cabinet and would agree to a formal role in shaping policy from outside. In this event, the Communist deputies might be assigned important committee chairmanships in Parliament and, in return for that and other pledges, would cooperate in supporting programs to deal with the economic crisis.

Not surprisingly in Italian politics, there is another possibility: that the Communists and Socialists will win more so."

BRITISH GOVERNMENT SURVIVES KEY VOTE

LONDON, June 9 (AP)—Britain's Labor Government defeated a motion of no confidence on its economic policies today by 309 to 290 in the House of Commons.

Margaret Thatcher, leader of the Conservatives, charged that "drift, debt and decay" had been the whole course of the Government.

Prime Minister James Callaghan, bolstered by an international rescue operation for the pound, replied that Britain's inflation rate would be halved by the end of 1977 from its current 18.9 percent, and that unemployment would be halved by the end of 1978.

The Government's previous target had been to halve the inflation, the highest rate of any industrial nation, by the end of this year and to cut unemployment to 3 percent from its current 6 by the end of next year.

The Liberals, with 13 votes, abstained from voting on the motion.

338-91 Parliament Vote Ends 1939 Curb—But Restrictions Are Kept

By HENRY GINGER
Special to The New York Times

MADRID, June 9—Parliament today approved a bill today to legalize political parties, which have been forbidden since 1939. Less than seven months after Generalissimo Francisco Franco's death, 338 of the 561 members voted to reestablish party democracy; 91 voted against, 24 abstained and slightly over 100 absented themselves.

Like most of the Government's changes, this one contained restrictions. The Government will have the power to accept or reject a party and has already made clear its intention to use this power against the Communists. Similarly, a law passed last month widening the right of assembly gives the Government considerable discretionary power over who can meet and where.

Just before today's vote, Adolfo Suárez, the minister in charge of the National Movement, the single-party system devised by Franco, sought to persuade the deputies that the bill was a way of "completing the work" of Franco.

"The Government, which is the legitimate manager of this historic moment, has the responsibility of setting in motion the necessary mechanisms for the definitive consolidation of a modern democracy," Mr. Suárez said. "To achieve this, the starting point lies in the recognition of a pluralistic society."

Mr. Suárez said that Spain today was different from what it was years ago "and it is possible to give it greater opportunities for freedom and democracy."

But in the two days of sometimes bitter debate, the followers of Franco saw not a completion but a dismantling of Franco's labors and of the 40 years of peace and prosperity they said he had achieved.

Raimundo Fernández-Cuesta, a 73-year-old Falangist appointed to Parliament by Franco, denounced the destruction of the National movement and warned that the country would be unable to resist the resurgence of Marxism, which, he said, "is the real and effective danger that weighs upon us."

After the vote the members went on to approve informally changes in the penal code to harmonize it with the greater freedom now accorded groups to assemble and associate and to make more specific what will be illegal in Spain in the political field.

The measure was sent back to the Committee on Justice, which will later present a definitive bill. This will declare illegal associations to be those that are contrary to public morals, that intend to commit crime, or that aim at violent subversion or the destruction of the juridical, political, social and economic order. Groups that promote discrimination based on race, religion, sex or economic status or that, subjected to international discipline, seek the implantation of a totalitarian system will also be illegal. The last clause was aimed specifically at the Communist Party.

With passage of the association bill, a critical moment in Spain's political transition was reached. The question was whether the anti-Franco opposition would continue to reject the reforms as insufficient, or would cooperate by applying for legalization. The major problem was the Communist Party, to which such important opposition groups as the Christian Democrats and Socialists are linked in a common front called Democratic Coordination.

The country was reminded of another danger to peaceful change in the killing today near Bilbao of a local official of the National Movement, Luis Carlos Albo Llamasa.

The killing was officially attributed to the Basque nationalist group E.T.A. and was part of a cycle of violence perpetrated in the Basque country in the last few weeks by opposing fringe groups of the extreme left and extreme right. Such groups, like the Communists, will be refused legal status.

The Communists have succeeded in persuading the vast bulk of the centrist and leftist opposition to join them in denouncing this restriction. But it is not expected that the non-Communist groups will push solidarity to the point of rejecting an opportunity for which they have been fighting for almost four decades.

Some Christian Democratic leaders have confided that their groups will apply to the Ministry of the Interior for registration as legal parties, then make the question of legalization for the Communists a major point of their platform in the parliamentary elections due to be held early next year.

By that time, two other major political changes will have been enacted, according to the Government program. One is the transformation of the present Parliament into a bicameral legislature in which the lower house and part of the upper house would be elected by universal suffrage. Because this directly involves a constitutional change, the law will be submitted to a referendum in October. The other measure will be an electoral law setting out the mode of election of members of Parliament.

European Criticism Upsets the Germans

Special to The New York Times

WEST BERLIN, June 9—A sudden spate of criticism in Western Europe was stirred by a scolding and debate in West Germany over why "the ugly German" is reappearing. People in France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Italy and Scandinavia have accused West Germany of curbing civil rights by excluding radical extremists from teaching and other civil-service positions. A program on the Government-run Belgian television network likened German conditions to those in Chile and Spain. A Swedish radio commentary spoke of "fascist tendencies."

Many people here and in Bonn discern deep-seated doubts about German democracy, lining distrust of one-time militarism and jealousy of West Germany's economic success. Some Germans are troubled because they had hoped that they had lived down the shame of the Nazi era, more than 30 years past.

As for the criticism, a nationwide television show devoted to the re-emergence of the image of the ugly German included Gaston Thorn, Prime Minister of Luxembourg, who commented that many Europeans, in viewing the current economic power and efficiency of West Germany, "wonder who won the war." He warned that rich countries were "beset by special problems" and said they must show particular tact and reticence.

Schmidt is Target
Tactlessness is something the opposition Christian Democrats have sought to pin on Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, a Social Democrat. With the election this fall in mind, they said he was responsible for anti-German sentiment through his free-wheeling comments on other countries' affairs, notably his advice to France and Italy on how to cope with the Communists.

European criticism of West Germany is largely centered on how it has dealt with its leftists since a crackdown by the federal, state and local authorities in the wake of student unrest in the late 1960's. Under a special 1972 decree, so-called extremists can be excluded from all public posts.

Willy Brandt, the Social Democratic leader, who was Chancellor then, said in a recent interview that he had erred in signing the regulation and that it had resulted in "grotesque failures."

Under the ruling half a million people aspiring to become civil servants have been subjected to interrogation, tests and hearings on their political beliefs and activities. Close to 400 have been rejected, and many others have had to wait for months before being confirmed. A recent case that caused particular dismay was that of Silvia Giengold, a 29-year-old Communist Party member, who was refused a teaching job in Hesse; her parents, who are Jews, had been persecuted by the Nazis.

In apparent response to the Giengold case, Francois Mitterrand, the French Socialist leader, announced that he planned to set up an international committee for the defense of civil and professional rights in West Germany.

'Spirit of Intolerance'
Another well-known Frenchman, Prof. Alfred Grosser, a political scientist who won the German Peace Prize at the Frankfurt Book Fair last year, deplored Mr. Mitterrand's initiative as partisan, but he too maintained that "a spirit of intolerance is growing in Germany."

Under West German law, civil servants are required to defend the Constitution, which is in force in states and cities they reason why the authorities have danger of a serious fire and a related safety problem at the world's largest nuclear power plant well before a major fire broke out there. Government documents show.

According to the minutes of the meeting, which was attended by officials of both the Atomic Energy Commission and the Tennessee Valley Authority, D. E. Patterson, a Commission safety expert, said, "The probability of a catastrophic fire was apparently much higher than the probability of other events for which the A.E.C. advisory committee on reactor safeguards require special preventive measures."

Another warning, which was sent to the Washington headquarters of the Atomic Energy Commission, was contained in a report based on a five-day inspection of Browns Ferry plant in January of 1970.

Mr. Murphy said the electrical cable installation at Browns Ferry and several other nuclear power plants "did not meet the intent of their respective final safety analysis reports nor what would be considered good industry practices."

Mr. Rusche said that he felt the "experience we had at Browns Ferry, the events, the circumstances, point to the fact that the regulatory structure achieved its objective of protecting life and property."

The Browns Ferry station is not yet back in operation. Repairs cost $7 million. Coal to generate the electricity that would have been generated by the two reactors has already cost the T.V.A. $130 million.

get held a small candle near a flammable insulation to determine whether air was escaping from a cable room beneath the main control room of the reactor. The resulting fire in the insulation burned out many essential control cables and because of this the operators of the plant had considerable difficulty closing down one of the two units then operating.

U.S. and Panama Report Progress in Canal Talks

By JUAN DEONIS
Special to The New York Times

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 9—The United States and Panama today reported "significant progress" in negotiations for a new canal treaty and pledged "a most serious effort to achieve such a treaty as promptly as possible."

In a joint statement at the sixth general assembly of the Organization of American States, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Foreign Minister Aquilino Boyd of Panama emphasized the "spirit of compromise" and the "understanding of new realities" that they said animated the negotiations.

"Differences remain between the two parties on important issues: the period of duration of the new treaty and the arrangements for the land and water areas comprising the present Panama Canal Zone," the statement said.

Latin Officials Heartened

But the foreign ministers from 23 member countries of the O.A.S. were told that the commitment remained in full force to achieve a treaty that would "be seen by our sister republics as reflecting a new era of cooperation in the Americas."

The wording of the joint statement was virtually the same as that of a report made last year to the meeting of American foreign ministers, but Latin American officials were heartened that the United States position had not been altered in an election year.

With the future of the Panama Canal now an issue in the United States campaign, large part because of the opposition of Ronald Reagan and Southern conservatives to any change in the status of the Canal Zone, the results of yesterday's election in Ohio and New Jersey were watched with interest here.

Most foreign ministers who commented privately on the results said that President Ford's victory in Ohio, despite Mr. Reagan's expected victory in California, appeared to maintain his lead for the Republican nomination.

This is reassuring in Panama, as well as most other countries that support the principle of a new treaty that will restore Panamanian sovereignty over the Canal Zone. Mr. Boyd has referred to Mr. Reagan as a "racist extremist" who would be a "dangerous man" in the White House.

Economic Cooperation Debated

With the assembly now in its fifth working day, the deliberations of the ministers in closed-door sessions at the Diego Portales conference center shifted from human rights, which occupied most of the first days of talks, to economic cooperation.

Mr. Kissinger, replying to pleas from Colombia and Costa Rica for trade preferences for Latin American countries, proposed that an inter-American consultative group on commodities be established.

The group would pool information on production and demand, channel investments to those commodities in short supply and detect price instability.

In this proposal, as in several others, Mr. Kissinger said the Ford Administration was prepared to be helpful within the limit of executive power and existing laws. He made it clear he was promising nothing without Congressional support or new legislation.

Trade Proposal Backed

Replying to complaints by Venezuela and Ecuador about their exclusion by Congress from tariff advantages because of their membership in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, Mr. Kissinger said he would seek an amendment to the United States Trade Act. But he gave no assurances it would be accepted by Congress.

Mr. Kissinger said the United States would support proposals by Panama, Chile and other countries that a special O.A.S. general assembly on development cooperation be convened, but not before next year.

He suggested that such an assembly could set up an inter-American commission for trade cooperation and establish a regional center on technology as a way of encouraging the flow of technology from public and private sources into Latin America.

Most of these proposals or ideas, adapted to regional dimensions, were similar to the views on international economic cooperation that Mr. Kissinger put forward recently in Nairobi, Kenya, at the fourth United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, and at other world forums.

Delegates here observed that the force of these proposals was limited by the lack of a Congressional mandate in some cases and in others by the widespread belief that Mr. Kissinger is winding up his long period of decisive influence on United States foreign policy.

U.S. SEES EASING OF ARAB BOYCOTT

Simon Says Bill in Congress Might Hamper Progress

By ROBERT D. HERSHEY Jr.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 9—The Administration declared today that the United States was making significant progress in blunting the Arab countries' economic boycott of Israel and argued that legislative remedies might prove harmful to its diplomatic efforts.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon told the House International Relations Committee that several Arab governments were negotiating contracts with American companies that conducted business with the Israelis, an indication that the force of the boycott was diminishing.

Legislation to counter the boycott, he held, would "be detrimental to the totality of United States interests both here and in the Middle East," by making the boycott less an economic matter and more one of national pride.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Board Chairman, Arthur F. Burns, said American banks played a major part in the boycott and that Congressional efforts failed to solve the problem.

"It is clear to me that banks in the United States play a crucial role in giving effect to the Arab boycott in this country," Dr. Burns said in a letter, released today, to a House Government Operations subcommittee.

"Our banks are not only securing assurances from Arab importers that they are not buying goods of Israeli origin, but they also serve as instrumentality whereby United States citizens having unrelated dealings with Israel may be denied access to the Arab market."

Congressional Democrats continued to press for legislation, probably by amending the Export Administration Act, to prohibit participation in boycotts by American companies.

Currently the act simply states it is United States policy to "encourage and request" companies not to do so.

Representative John E. Moss of California cited inadequate removal of branches, subsidiaries and affiliates of American banks in the Mideast, while the number in Israel fell from 14 in 1973 to six in 1975, Mr. Moss reported.

Responding to Representative Ben Rayburn of Texas, a Government Operations committee, the House Securities and Exchange Commission, said today the bad nine investigations involving questionable disclosure responses to the official, I said some of the improper means removal from the blacklist, and that allegations that a refused to do bust privately owned subsidiaries and affiliates of American banks in the Mideast rose, partly because the number in Israel fell from 14 in 1973 to six in 1975, Mr. Moss reported.

GROWTH TRENDS Americans Have growing Taller

By JAMES
The June 9—of ever-in-American ended, accorded to a Government report made public today.

"This could be the result of our having reached the limits of our genetic potential regarding growth," said Dr. Peter V.
Hamill, chairman of a Government-sponsored group studying American growth trends.
The study group, analyzing data on more than 20,000 American children from infancy through adolescence, concluded that the trend toward ever-bigger Americans had either ceased or had nearly ceased and that this was the "most dramatic and significant finding" of its study.

The stature of Americans has been increasing steadily, decade-by-decade, during most of the last century. Figures from the National Center for Health Statistics put the average height of adults today at slightly more than 5 feet 9 inches for men and 5 feet 4 inches for women; gains of about four inches in the last 100 years.
Among 8-to-11-year-olds, the rate of growth increase was about 10 percent during the 30 years through 1965, according to the center's data. For 10-year-old boys, this amounted to about one-half inch per decade; that is, the 10-year-olds of the 1950's averaged one-half of an inch taller than the 10-year-olds of the 1940's.

But, in the last decade, the center's data show, the trend has virtually ceased.
At a news conference today, Dr. Hamill said trends toward a leveling off of growth appeared several decades ago among population samples representing Americans in the highest socio-economic and educational range, but that the same was true now of virtually the entire population.

Dr. Hamill said that only among the group of children who are the smallest for their age does there still seem to be a trend toward an increase in size from 1-year-olds to the same age group of later years.
Dr. Francis E. Johnston, a member of the study group and professor of anthropology at the University of Pennsylvania, said the general leveling off could be interpreted to mean that the environmental factors in human growth are making their maximum contribution in the United States. By environmental factors, he meant such things as good nutrition, pure water and freedom from many of the common infectious diseases of childhood.

The studies described today were done to prepare a new set of human growth charts to be used by physicians, nutritionists and others as aids in detecting illness that interferes with childhood growth.
Dorothy P. Rice, director of the National Center for Health Statistics, said the growth charts made public today represent the first major revision in more than 30 years.
Dr. Hamill said most of the changes and improvements were at the extremes of the charts—the tallest and shortest children in an age group, for example. He said it was in the extremes that such charts were most important in showing aberrations in growth that reflect health problems.

The new data have been published in a set of 14 charts showing height, weight and head circumference of infants and children. The height and weight charts cover the age groups from infancy through 17 years. Most women have achieved their full height by the end of the 17th year; men continue some growth for several years more. Weight trends are more variable among both men and women.

Also made public today was the text of a report from the health statistics agency describing the data on which the charts are based. This will be published as part of the center's regular series of monthly vital statistics reports.
The charts themselves are being distributed to state and community health agencies through the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. Both the health statistics agency and the Center for Disease Control are units of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

alcoholism. A few Blue Cross plans, such as those in Maryland, Delaware and Harrisburg, Pa., now provide for out-patient alcoholism care.

But Blue Cross officials said that less than 10 percent of the total cost of alcoholism rehabilitation was now covered by private insurance and health care protection programs.

Alcoholism is the fourth most common disorder affecting Americans, Blue Cross said, ranking behind heart disease, cancer and mental illness. The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism says that about 9 million, or one in 10, of the 95 million Americans who drink are either alcoholic persons or problem drinkers, defined as those who cause trouble for themselves or society.

Alcoholism is said to cost the country $25 billion each year in lost work time and productivity, motor vehicle accidents and treatment not only for alcoholism but also for other diseases and accidents, such as broken bones, caused or aggravated by alcoholism.

The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism has agreed to spend $208,000 and Blue Cross $80,000 more for the first in what Blue Cross plans as a step-by-step program before it offers alcoholism coverage to all subscribers.

Mr. McNerney said that broad coverage could come only after careful planning. "Development of a benefit for millions of subscribers is a tricky business because if the program is not designed properly," it could cause Blue Cross serious economic losses and defeat the basic aim of the problem it was designed to help, Mr. McNerney said.

Beginning June 25, Blue Cross workers will spend 12 months seeking answers to such questions as:

QWhat kinds of treatment should be covered—hospital, outpatient, intermediate care, counseling, rehabilitation and for what period of time?

QHow can a reasonable premium rate be set to cover such a complex benefit package?

QHow can the benefit be marketed, considering the fact that many alcoholic persons deny their own problem and many others, including some employers, think of alcoholic persons in terms of punishing them rather than sharing the cost of helping them?

QWhat legal problems will be encountered with state laws that limit some Blue Cross plans to in-hospital and medically supervised care?

QHow can misuse of the benefit be controlled, to make sure each person under treatment is receiving the proper therapy in the proper setting?

QWhat educational programs will be needed for the public, employers, doctors, hospitals, other health care workers and alcoholic persons?

QWhat procedures will be needed to administer the program effectively and economically?

Then, Blue Cross said that it would start pilot projects, lasting about two years in two or three areas of the country. If these programs prove effective, Blue Cross will broaden its coverage to subscribers elsewhere.

Is it true that men are the best chefs?

Some men think so, and some women agree. To celebrate the opening of our wonderful new gourmet housewares center, we're having a big party all this week with lots of excitement. Prizes. Demonstrations. Giveaways. Recipes. And, Father's Day being June 20th, we've asked some distinguished men to come cook their favorite dishes. Look over the schedule of events for today through Saturday, then come see, sniff, taste, and have a great time. Ladies, we hope you'll come, too.

Make this June 20th Father's finest Day!

Democrats Remove Hays From Campaign Fund Unit

By RICHARD D. LYONS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 9—Disgusted with what he saw as the ineffectiveness of Congress and his inability to make a significant mark there, Representative Wayne L. Hays, the central figure in two investigations into charges of payroll padding, from one of his four committee chairmanships.

In a five-minute meeting and by unanimous vote, the members of the Democratic National Congressional Committee replaced Mr. Hays as their chairman with Representative James C. Cormen of California.

Last week, after allegations that he had used Government funds to employ Elizabeth Ray as his mistress, Mr. Hays offered to "temporarily step aside" from the position, but today his offer was made permanent.

In a related action earlier today, the House voted 388 to 0 to comply with a Justice Department subpoena calling for a Federal grand jury here to receive payroll and other personnel records of Miss Ray and three other persons who either are serving or have served as staff aides to the House Administration Committee, of which Mr. Hays is chairman.

Possible Violations Cited

The subpoena said that the records were needed to investigate "possible violations" of Federal laws dealing with bribery, graft, conspiracy and the making of false statements.

In a surprise move, the House by voice vote approved the heading of a second subpoena for payroll and personnel records of James F. Hastings, a former Republican Representative from upstate New York, together with four other persons, at least three of whom formerly served as his aides.

According to the second subpoena, the Hastings records will be used in conjunction with an investigation of possible violations of Federal laws dealing with mail fraud and conspiracy.

The Associated Press quoted Mr. Hastings as saying he did not have the "slightest idea" what the subpoena was about.

While the subpoena was issued by the same judge as the first, and asked that the records be turned over to the same grand jury, there seemed to be no connection between the cases of Mr. Hastings and Mr. Hays.

Mr. Hastings abruptly quit Congress in the middle of his fourth term last December to head Associated Industries a 2,800-member lobbying group at the State Legislature in Albany. He explained that he was $19,000 in debt and had become disgusted with what he saw as the ineffectiveness of Congress and his inability to make a significant mark there.

The vote to unseat Mr. Hays from the chairmanship of the 53-member campaign committee was made in secret session. Those present said it was made without either incident or debate.

Mr. Hays, who earlier returned from his district in Ohio, where yesterday he won nomination for his 15th consecutive term to office, was not present at the meeting.

Representative Thomas P. O'Neill of Massachusetts, the majority leader, who had demanded the ouster of Mr. Hays from the campaign committee chairmanship as well as that of the House Administration Committee, said that Mr. Hays had sent word that he was resigning the campaign post.

Mr. O'Neill said that the message had been delivered by Representative Thomas E. Morgan of Pennsylvania, who Mr. Hays suggested last week as his temporary replacement.

Morgan Took Chair

Since Mr. Morgan was the senior committee member present, Mr. O'Neill said, he took the chair during the meeting. Then a motion naming Mr. Cormen as chairman was made by Representative John J. McFall, and seconded by Representative Phillip Burton. Like Mr. Cormen, both are Californians.

"The vote was unanimous," Mr. O'Neill said.

The committee distributes campaign funds to incumbent Democrats seeking re-election, and Mrs. Hays's chairmanship had become a political issue since he signed the checks. In election years about $500,000 might be distributed to selected incumbents facing stiff opposition.

Many Democrats want Mr. Hays demoted so as not to give their opponents a campaign issue.

The political intrigue was apparent during the subpoena vote earlier when Republicans forced a recorded vote on the issue. Complying with subpoenas generally is done by unanimous voice vote.

When the Democrats sought to gloss over the issue, Representative Robert E. Bauman, Republican of Maryland, said, "I think this is a matter of sufficient interest" to merit a vote, and through a parliamentary maneuver, he forced the Democrats into having one.

The size of the vote could be an indication of the members attitude toward Mr. Hays.

Blumenthal, Majority Leader, to Retire From Assembly in Fall

Several legislators seemed on the verge of tears as they left the conference and wordlessly brushed past waiting reporters. Mr. Blumenthal's daily antagonism as minority leader, embraced him on the Assembly floor. "His leaving takes something from me and from 18 million people in the state," Mr. Duryea said.

The deep emotional impact that Mr. Blumenthal's announcement had on other legislators seemed to reflect not only their affection for him, but also their own beliefs that the Legislature is becoming a less and less attractive place to spend a career. The retirement of a relatively young man from a safe seat at the height of his leadership powers seemed to shock some of them into examining their own premises. "Public servants are men and women of flesh and emotions and no one can demand that they pay a price for public service that is not demanded of everyone else," Senator Manfred Ohrenstein, the Democratic minority leader, said in an emotional tribute to his West Side colleague on the Senate floor.

Mr. Blumenthal got a standing ovation in the Senate when he was introduced there by Lieut. Gov. Mary Anne Krupsak. "It seems that the best are those that leave," said Warren St. Anderson, Republican of Southampton, and the majority leader, adding, "The whole Legislature will be diminished by the fact that his voice will not be here next year."

Majority leader Albert H. Blumenthal patting May Newburger, a secretary, in Albany yesterday when she broke into tears after hearing of his decision not to run for re-election.

Mr. Blumenthal's announcement had on other legislators seemed to reflect not only their affection for him, but also their own beliefs that the Legislature is becoming a less and less attractive place to spend a career. Widebody comfort. On our big, spacious 707 widebodies, there's two-across seating—so you're never more than one seat from the aisle. We think it's the most comfortable way to fly.

TWA's on-time performance record has beaten American and United for 12 consecutive months through March 1976. We have a higher percentage of flights arriving within 15 minutes of schedule than our competitors do. This claim is based on the percentage of domestic flights actually flown which arrived on time, or within 15 minutes of schedule, as shown in CAB records. This represents 55% of TWA's available seat miles.

Some of the finest restaurants in the country competed for this prestigious award. But the winner was a man who works for an airline. Dieter Buehler, Dining Director TWA. This is the first time someone from an airline has won in the 21 years the International Foodservice Manufacturers Association has given the award.

The American Express Card. Don't leave home without it. Use it to pay for your TWA airline ticket, hotels, meals, car rentals, or just about anything else you need on your trip. If you don't have an American Express Card, pick up an application wherever the card is welcomed. Or call (800) 528-8000.

The next time you're planning to fly, call your Travel Agent or Corporate Travel Department and ask for TWA.

Infant Dies After Being Taken From Doctor Held in 10 Deaths

LOS ANGELES, June 9 (AP)—A baby girl taken from a facility operated by an osteopathic physician charged with murder in the deaths of 10 infants died yesterday five hours after she was admitted to County-U.S.C. Medical Center, a spokesman said.

The physician, Dr. Joseph Emory, 55 years old, is charged with 10 counts of murder. His wife, Harriet, 51, was also booked on 10 counts, and his son, Alan, 32, was booked on five counts.

The baby girl who died yesterday was one of six newborn infants and their mothers taken from a facility in Highland Park operated by Dr. Emory.

The child was admitted to the medical center at 5:15 A.M. in an incubator, suffering from respiratory distress, and died at 10:30 P.M., the spokesman said.

The other infants, all boys, and their mothers remained at the medical center. Three of the infants were reported in good condition and two were placed in the special-care nursery.

Other Clinics Suggested
Three facilities operated by Dr. Emory remained open, but a spokesman for the district attorney said that all patients were being referred elsewhere by persons at the facilities.

The deputy district attorney, Dinko Bozanic, said the deaths of the newborn infants allegedly resulted from a "wanting and reckless disregard for life" in the cut-rate clinic operated by Dr. Emory.

District Attorney John Van de Kamp asked the state Osteopathic Board to revoke Dr. Emory's license. Dr. Emory lost his license following his conviction for second-degree murder in the death of a woman who had undergone an abortion in 1960 and another conviction three years later for performing an illegal abortion. The authorities said.

The osteopath served two years in state prison from 1967 to 1969.

Mr. Van de Kamp said that 25 babies had died in the clinic operated by Dr. Emory since his license was restored on May 2, 1974. He said that Dr. Emory's name had appeared on more than 700 birth certificates since then.

The district attorney said that virtually all the patients were Mexican aliens attracted by the minimal prices charged by Emory for child delivery, usually $200 to $300, about half the going rate.

Mr. Van de Kamp said that Dr. Emory was the only one at the facility with a medical license.

U.S. COMMUNISTS ASK FOR BALLOT INQUIRY

LANSING, Mich., June 9 (AP)—Gus Hall, the Communist party's Presidential candidate, says he has asked Attorney General Edward H. Levi to determine whether election officials are illegally hindering the party from getting on the ballot in various states, including Michigan.

Mr. Hall called for an investigation yesterday after Michigan's Board of State Canvassers delayed certification of Communist nominating petitions and five local election clerks moved to disqualify 4,262 of the 21,899 petitioners' signatures.

In requesting a further check the clerks said they wanted to keep Communists off the ballot to avoid using paper ballots on Nov. 2.

The party needs 17,674 signatures to be listed on the primary ballot, and must win three-tenths of 1 percent of the primary vote to qualify for the general election.

AUGUSTA, Me., June 9 (AP)—The Communist Party has won a position on Maine's November general election ballot for its Presidential candidate the Secretary of State's office said yesterday. The party files nominating petitions bearing 13,418 signatures with the Secretary of State before the 5 P.M. deadline yesterday.

RESH A KID
SAL GRASS

The distribution pattern has given rise to a joke now circulating among Russians, in which a collective farm chairman promises his workers that under Communism each farmer will have a helicopter some day.

"Why do I need a helicopter?" a farmer asks. "When there is no sausage in the stores, you can fly in your helicopter to Moscow and buy it there," the farm chairman explains.

The meat shortage has been accentuated by consumer expectations raised in the Government's effort to improve diet. In the decade since Leonid I. Brezhnev took power in 1965, meat consumption per capita has risen from 90 pounds to nearly 128 pounds last year, according to Soviet statistics. This is still about half the American consumption per capita.

At the same time, the intake of carbohydrates has declined. Last year, statistics show, the average Russian ate 264 pounds of potatoes, or 48 pounds less than in 1965. Bread consumption per capita dropped 31 pounds in the same period to 312 pounds last year.

Livestock Is Reduced
However, Mr. Smirnov said, nutritionists at the Soviet Academy of Medical Sciences have determined that the "rational norm" of meat consumption should be about 180 pounds a year, leaving a gap of 52 pounds before the present meat shortage.

The Kremlin remains committed to bolstering meat production. A decree by the Central Committee issued this month urged the broader development of agrarian industrial concerns like those in Moldavia, where many thousands of animals are raised for slaughter under a single roof.

But, as Mr. Brezhnev reminded the party congress in February, "feeds remain the foundation for the promotion of livestock breeding." Consequently, an abundant harvest this year still offers the best remedy not just for the meat shortage but also for any consumer discontent that may have accumulated.

Though conditions were dry this spring in the southern Ukraine and some regions of southern Russia and northern Kazakhstan, moisture has been sufficient in other vital areas. Winter crops suffered a frost winterkill estimated at 20 to 25 percent. But Western specialists see no other reason so far why the Soviet Union should not achieve its target of 205 million tons.

Meanwhile, Moscow continues to look to the West for feed as well as cereal grains. It has already bought slightly more than 12 million tons of corn for livestock feed and 4.4 million tons of wheat for bakery products from the United States for delivery before October. And it has purchased over two million tons of grain so far from next year's American crop.

The Soviet Union is also spending foreign currency to import meat. In April, it bought 25,000 tons of mutton and 10,000 tons of beef from New Zea-

The nation's livestock remains reduced since the distress slaughtering. Last month, hogs had decreased 18 percent and poultry 13 percent below the May 1975 level. Sheep and goats dropped 4 percent. Cattle herds are slightly above last year's level, but the edge has declined from 4 percent in January to 1 percent in May.

In the Central Asian republic of Tadzhikistan, it was reported that farmers were sending cattle to market without fattening them beforehand. The newspaper Kommunist Tadzhikistan found that sale weight had dropped as much as 37 pounds per head in one district. In another, collective farms slaughtered 6,000 head of cattle but sold only 800 to the state, keeping the rest for themselves.

Despite a lack of fodder, farmers have been warned again against feeding their personal animals cheaper state-subsidized bread. Under a 1963 law, persistent violators can get one to three years' imprisonment as well as fines. Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, recently publicized the case of a farm couple from Novgorod who were sentenced to a year of "corrective labor" and confiscation of livestock for having fed bread to their five pigs.

Taiwan Discloses A Major Shuffling Of Cabinet Leaders

Special to The New York Times
TAIPEI, Taiwan, June 9—The Government today announced a major shuffle involving nine Cabinet posts and the majority of Taipei.

The shifts had been expected before the scheduled party congress of the governing Kuomintang in November. But a scandal in the Finance Ministry that led to the abrupt dismissal of two sub-Cabinet officials last week may have forced the change now.

In the realignment two important figures, Finance Minister K.T. Li and Communications Minister Henry Kao, were shifted to the less significant posts of minister without portfolio. Wang Jen-yuan, previously a key political adviser to Prime Minister Chiang Ching-kuo, was replaced as justice minister. Legislators had charged that his life style was indiscreet and suspiciously lavish.

K.T. Li, frequently credited with having been one of the chief architects of Taiwan's rapid economic development, had been hospitalized with a heart ailment this spring and had inquired to be transferred to a less demanding post.

Mr. Rosenthal said that Miss Lewis, in carrying out her new duties would do even more traveling about Europe than she has already been doing, pulling together a whole range of European-wide subjects—party and ideological trends, the Common Market, diplomatic initiatives, and relating those trends to events in the United States.

Miss Lewis has been chief of the Paris bureau of The Times since 1972. She came to the post after a varied career as a correspondent in Washington and abroad and as a syndicated columnist and author. A native of Los Angeles, she graduated summa cum laude from the University of California at Los Angeles at the age of 18. After a year at the Columbia School of Journalism she worked here for The Associated Press, was transferred to Washington in 1942 to cover the State Department and three years later was assigned to London.

Washington Drops Free Water Rights, Ending a Tradition

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 9 (AP)—The Old West tradition of free, perpetual water rights has ended in this state.

The rain-drenched Northwest faces a water shortage and the state decided yesterday to end the practice of giving away vast amounts of irrigation water under the traditional idea of "first in time, first in right."

Under terms of the new regulations, this Department of Ecology will have the authority to impose a 50-year term limit on permits for irrigation of more than 2,000 acres.

The ecology director, John Biggs, called his signing of the regulations the most important act since the agency was created in 1970. He and Gov. Daniel J. Evans developed the plan.

Reaction from opponents was quick and heated. The Western Environmental Trade Association and the Association of Washington Irrigation Districts announced plans to challenge the regulations in court.

The Washington Environmental Council, however, supported the move.

At issue, those on both sides agree, is the right of use water to irrigate over a half-million acres of arid land in eastern Washington. The U. & I. Sugar Company, for instance, wants to irrigate over 50,000 acres in the Horse Heaven Hills in southeast Washington.

The time-honored "in perpetuity" water right is crucial, says Russ Smith, head of the Association of Washington Irrigation Districts. But Governor Evans, Mr. Biggs and others said it was irresponsible for corporate farmers to tie the hands of future generations by snapping up all the remaining, unappropriated water.

"Future generations may find a higher and better use for water than irrigation, even though such a use is not immediately obvious to us," Mr. Evans said.

With the exception of some stretches of the Columbia and Lower Snake rivers, all the river water is spoken for and, in some cases, overappropriated, Mr. Evans says.

Existing permits will not be affected.

Ban on Press Stands In Sabich Slaying Case

DENVER, June 9 (UPI)—The Colorado Supreme Court refused today to reverse a judge's ruling barring the press from tomorrow's preliminary hearing for Claudine Longet, who is accused of slaying Vladimir Sabich, the skier, at the mountain chalet they shared in Aspen.

The court voted 4 to 2 not to intervene in the court proceedings at this time, although an attorney representing 14 news agencies argued the secret hearings would violate the constitutional rights of the public to an open court process.

The Supreme Court did not explain its reasons for refusing to intervene. Chief Justice Edward Prigle did not participate in the decision.

Assembly in Albany Votes Plan to Allow City U. to Reopen, but the Senate Leaders Show Reluctance

PETERSON
New York Times

Albany, N.Y., June 9—The State Assembly today passed a plan to allow the City University of New York to reopen, but the Senate leaders showed reluctance to do so. The measure, which would allow the city to take over the university system's 10 four-year colleges, was passed by a vote of 87 to 55, with most of the opposition coming from the suburbs. The plan would allow the city to take over the university system's 10 four-year colleges. The measure sets a three-year timetable for a gradual state takeover of financing for the university system's 10 four-year colleges. Instead of allowing Mayor Beame to go ahead with his plan to end all city support for the senior colleges after the coming 1976-77 school year, it would require a continuing but million on the university in the coming school year, while repaying the dollar-for-dollar city-state matching fund system that now ties state aid to the city's contribution. This would allow the state to keep its contribution next year at $185 million, despite a decline in the city's share.

And the measure sets a three-year timetable for a gradual state takeover of financing for the university system's 10 four-year colleges. Instead of allowing Mayor Beame to go ahead with his plan to end all city support for the senior colleges after the coming 1976-77 school year, it would require a continuing but declining city contribution to these campuses through the 1978-79 academic year. In the Republican-controlled Senate, the majority leader, Warren M. Anderson of Binghamton, has produced a rival plan that would grant the $24 million advance—like the Assembly's bill, to be paid out of next school year's state aid appropriation—and defer the long-range financing issue until a study of the entire state higher education effort has been completed later this summer.

He has rejected the Democratic plan's repeal of the formula for matching funds, without which the state's obligation to the university after July 1 would drop along with the city's share by some $40 million. Accordingly, he has vowed to block the Assembly's package if it clears that house tonight and is sent to the Senate.

Governor Carey and the Assembly's Democratic leaders hope that passage of their measure tonight will put enough pressure on the seven Republican Senators from the city to force them to bolt party discipline and align with the Senate's 28 Democratic members who support the Assembly measure. Five Republican votes would provide the 31 votes needed for passage.

The defection of the seven city Republicans appeared nearly complete this evening, Senator Roy M. Goodman, Republican-Liberal of Manhattan, issued a statement that all but endorsed the Assembly measure and described the Anderson plan as inadequate. Senator John D. Calandra, Republican of the Bronx and a powerful figure in the Senate, similarly said today that he would vote for the Assembly bill if given a chance to do so.

"I'm not giving up on C.U.N.Y.," Senator Calandra said, adding that the Anderson plan was "like giving a guy an aspirin when what he needs is a shot in the arm."

In the event that the Assembly passes its bill, Senator Anderson was reported to be considering bottling it up in a Senate committee and refusing to allow it to be brought to the floor. He could also attack it by amending it, presumably to whittle it down to the proportions of his own proposal.

These moves could be defeated by a majority vote, assuming the city Republicans in the Senate defy their leader—which is always a risky step in Albany politics—and vote with the Democrats to do so. Calling the bill out of committee would take at least three days, postponing final action on the measure until the week after next, when the Legislature returns from a one-week recess. Political interests have played a far greater role in the long and confused debate over the City University crisis than educational concerns.

Although Senator Anderson argues persuasively that he is opposed on the grounds of reason and principle to the Assembly plan, he could also profit politically by being able to hold it hostage until the state's $20 million supplemental budget comes up for action later this month.

Senator Anderson's control over the measure would allow him to extract important concessions on other spending issues from the Democratic Governor and the Assembly.

The amendments added to the Assembly bill today strengthen the claim of the Spanish-oriented hostes Community College to the special $3 million bilingual and minority education program appropriation included by Governor Carey, and protect five career education baccalaureate programs at the predominantly black medgar Evers College.

MOYNIHAN READY FOR SENATE RACE

Expected to Announce His Democratic Effort Today

By MAURICE CARROLL
Daniel Patrick Moynihan's off-again, on-again candidacy for United States Senator from New York was on again, as of last night.
The former representative to the United Nations called a series of news conferences for today, starting in New York City and then making the traditional quick trip through upstate airports, to announce that he would become the sixth candidate in the race for the Democratic nomination.
Politicians said that Mr. Moynihan's main sponsor, Joseph F. Crangle, the Democratic leader of Erie County, was trying to put together the 25 percent vote for him in the state committee that puts a candidate on the primary election ballot without the need to gather petition signatures.
The committee meets next Tuesday in New York City. Long mentioned as a potential candidate, Mr. Moynihan was described by some close friends last week as having second thoughts.

His reluctance was said to have been prompted at least in part by leaders in the city, who encouraged by Mayor Beame, supported the candidacy of another of the six, Paul O'Dwyer, President of the City Council.
Even before Mr. Moynihan got around to announcing formally that he was holding a news conference, Mr. O'Dwyer issued a statement criticizing the Moynihan candidacy.
Few candidates, Mr. O'Dwyer said, offer "such questionable and negative credentials." He cited Mr. Moynihan's service in the Administration of President Richard M. Nixon.
"Mr. Moynihan comes to us," he said, "with high praise for Mr. Nixon on his lips."
It was not clear last night what might have prompted Mr. Moynihan to decide to make the race.
Already declared for the Sept. 14 primary, besides Mr. O'Dwyer, are Representative Bella S. Abzug, who represents the West Side of Manhattan and the Bronx in Congress; former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, the unsuccessful Democratic nominee for the Senate in 1974; Assemblyman Andrew J. Stein, the East Side legislator who won attention by investigating nursing-home abuses; and Abraham Hirschfeld, a wealthy builder of parking garages.

Some politicians said yesterday that Bess Myerson, the city's former Consumer Affairs Commissioner, and Bayard Rustin, the civil rights leader, would serve as Mr. Moynihan's co-chairmen. Miss Myerson denied that the decision had been made, and Mr. Rustin was not available for immediate comment. But both are expected to play some role in the Moynihan-for-Senator campaign.

The Democratic winner is expected to face the Conservative-Republican incumbent, James L. Buckley, in November. The Senator is expected to get both party designations, although Representative Peter A. Feyer intends to challenge him in the Republican primary.
On Saturday the Liberal Party is scheduled to endorse Henry J. Stern, Manhattan Council-

Mrs. Abzug Getting Help of Some of Her Colleagues, but Not Their Endorsements

By MARTIN TOLCHIN
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 9—Representative Bella S. Abzug, Democrat of Manhattan and a candidate for her party's Senate nomination, is a miffed feminist, but she has thus far been unable to win the support of her two women colleagues in New York City's Congressional delegation.

Mrs. Abzug, a longtime civil rights advocate, has thus far enlisted endorsements from only one of the delegation's three minority-group members.

And although she is an outspoken liberal, she has won only three endorsements from her 17 Democratic colleagues who make up the city's overwhelmingly liberal delegation—Herman Badillo and Jonathan B. Bingham of the Bronx and Frederick W. Richmond of Brooklyn.

In addition, Representative Shirley Chisholm of the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn and Charles B. Rangel of Harlem were among the sponsors of a $25-to-$100-a-ticket fund-raising event at the Arena Stage here for Mrs. Abzug tonight because they believe that she is entitled to wage a well-financed campaign, but both Mrs. Chisholm and Mr. Rangel have thus far withheld their endorsements.

Mrs. Abzug, who has been actively seeking the support of her House colleagues, said in an interview:

"Congresspeople are generally slow on endorsements. The primary is in an early stage. We haven't yet had all the candidates in."

However, the apathy toward her campaign among the Congressional colleagues who know her best appears to be a response to her past political conduct, her personality and the appeal of other candidates.

Mrs. Chisholm said that she was sponsoring tonight's fund-raising event because "I think it's very important from the standpoint of women in politics," and explained that "other women must help women candidates raise funds."

Mrs. Chisholm, asked whether her failure to endorse Mrs. Abzug was tied to Mrs. Abzug's failure to endorse Mrs. Chisholm's Presidential campaign in 1972, when Mrs. Abzug supported George McGovern, replied that "I never expected all the women or all the blacks to support me, but I did expect the support of a militant feminist."

"People have to remember, in this political business, that one good turn deserves another," Mrs. Chisholm said, "and that one bad turn sometimes deserves another."

Similarly, Elizabeth Holtzman, Democrat of Brooklyn, more smiled when asked whether her failure to endorse Mrs. Abzug was related to Mrs. Abzug's failure to support her successful campaign against Representative Emanuel Celler.

Miss Holtzman and Mrs. Abzug have not been the best of friends since Miss Holtzman's election in 1972. But Miss Holtzman, when asked why she had not thus far endorsed Mrs. Abzug, replied only that "I have not made an endorsement at this time."

Representative Rangel noted that many black politicians had endorsed the campaign of City Council President Paul O'Dwyer. "That crazy guy was sleeping in bombed-out houses in Mississippi when I was checking to see if the white race was around," Mr. Rangel said. "He's fought the fight and you didn't have to call for him twice."

"It's a terrible situation that I'm in," Mr. Rangel continued. "It's a no-win situation. I tell Paul, Bella's my colleague."

Of the other members of the delegation, some consider Mrs. Abzug politically unacceptable.

In order to beat Senator James L. Buckley, the Republican-Conservative incumbent, "we have to have someone who is not perceived as radical, but as a moderate liberal," said Representative Edward I. Koch, Democrat of Manhattan. "Otherwise we'll blow the election not only for the Senate, but for four or five freshmen Congressmen who picked up seats normally held by Republicans."

Did Mr. Koch consider Mrs. Abzug a radical?

"I never comment on my colleague's beliefs," he said.

Mr. Koch expressed disappointment in Daniel Patrick Moynihan, who is expected to announce his political intention tomorrow. When Mr. Moynihan met recently with the city's Congressional delegation, "he didn't pick up any votes," Mr. Koch said.

Representatives Stephen J. Solarz of Brooklyn, James L. Delaney of Queens and John M. Murphy of Brooklyn-Staten Island were among those who said that they would take no position until they saw who else entered the race.

Another Congressman, who declined to be named, said that "Bella is still the New Left, and we've progressed from that."

Still another said that "she's so anathema to many voters."

Representative Richmond said he had endorsed Mrs. Abzug because "she's a strong-will be a great force for liberal-thinker and doer," and added, "She has a will of iron, and will be a great force for liberalism in the Senate."

Similarly, Representative Badillo said: "I think she has incomparable experience as a member of the House—she knows the whole litany of things coming up."

Science Is Exploring the Ways Animals Use Odors and Secretions to Communicate

EBSTER groups in the field of animal pheromone study.

For the last half century, most of the intensive research into pheromones has been devoted to insects. Because of commercial factors, most pheromone research has been devoted to agricultural, orchard and forest moth pests, which employed their odors primarily as sex attractants. Insects such as bees and ants broadcast their pheromones as alarm signals and trail markers.

Recently, chemists have synthesized some of the moth pheromones, enabling analogues to be tested in the field. Promising results have been obtained in using these to trap the moth stage of pine and elm bark beetles, major forest threats, and the pink bollworm, a predator of Arizona's cotton crop.

It is expected that insect pheromones may also play a role in the eventual control of the spruce moth, whose larvae create an Eastern forest pest.

The success in identifying and analyzing the intricate chemical and biological pathways of insect pheromones has led researchers more recently to the study of pheromones in fish and mammals. In these higher animals, both the pheromones and the role they play become more complex.

In animals such as antelopes and Canidae (wolves, foxes, dogs, coyotes), all of which have extremely sophisticated olfactory systems, pheromones released by the animals' glands have been found to serve not only as sex attractants, alarms and trail markers, but also as recognition and identification signals, as territorial borderlines, as regulators of social behavior and even—in the case of the skunks as a defense mechanism.

Dr. Dietland Müller-Schwarze, an animal behaviorist at the College of Environmental Science and Forestry, told the conference that he had found that black-tailed deer use the tarsal glands on the insides of their hind legs as transmitters of odors that identify them as friendly to their own kind, but alien to other kinds, such as Rocky Mountain mule deer, a close relative.

A Sniff An Hour

Both species communicate within their own groups by means of the tarsal scent, sniffing other members of their group about once each hour. The scent is deposited on the skin and hair by the tarsal glands and is strong enough to be noticed by nearby humans.

In conducting experiments with his deer herd, Dr. Müller-Schwarze was aided by Dr. Robert M. Silverstein, a chemical ecologist at the college. Dr. Silverstein reduced the deer pheromone in the laboratory to its fractional components, providing along the way the first chemical analysis of a mammalian pheromone.

Participants in the conference noted that many mammals can have scent glands on several parts of their bodies. Some hoofed animals have scent glands in the spaces between their hoof pads as well as on their legs. Rabbits have a scent-producing gland on their chests as well as around their anal openings.

Cats have excretory glands between their eyes and ears and some scientists hypothesize that when a cat rubs its head against a piano stool or its owner's leg, it is "marking" its scent to indicate that it "belongs" to its owner, or vice versa.

Many animal biologists are convinced that an animal will sometimes use its scent to indicate not just a territorial prerogative, but to announce, in effect, that "I, a male, progressed antelope, am here!" the way birds, by their distinctive calls, are believed to proclaim their arrival and presence.

Dr. Roger Peters, a Colorado psychologist who has assisted Dr. David Mech of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service in his extensive studies of wolves in the wild, told the conference that their most recent studies indicated that wolf packs used a sophisticated scent-marking system, involving two methods of urinating: defecation and scratching marks on the snow or the ground.

The study, involving 96 radio telemetered wolves in several contiguous packs, also included aerial and ground observations. The men found that these chemical signals seemed to define clearly the borders of each pack's territory, enabling pack members to tell by scent differences when they had wandered out of their territory and apparently acting as an invisible barrier to invasion from other packs.

As possible confirmation of this latter theory, they observed a deer, wounded in one pack's territory, that fled its attackers and crossed into the territory of another pack. The wolves running after the deer abandoned their chase at the scent-marked border—an unusual action for wolves. The deer later was caught and devoured by the pack into whose territory it had been chased.

Other speakers noted that Australian rabbits, to prevent overpopulation and resultant starvation, use chin and anal glands to mark territories and keep other rabbits out. Fish have recently been found to release alarm pheromones when they are attacked and young fish of some species have been observed to release pheromones that identify them to their parents. And foxes have been found to scent-mark areas as a message to other foxes that there is little or no food available at that site.

Comparatively little research has been done on primates, but Dr. Richard P. Michael, of Emory University's School of Medicine in Atlanta, reported that vaginal discharges from rhesus monkeys and some other small apes had proved to be extremely attractive to male apes.

Few Human Studies

To date, only a handful of studies have been made of the use of human odors in communication, mostly subjective tests involving the comparative esthetics of sweat and underarm odor of men and women.

Dr. Roman Mykytowycz, an Australian wildlife researcher, said that his rabbit research and other studies demonstrated that "Animals need to communicate. To maintain characteristic forms of behavior and the orderly functioning of social units, signals have to be changed between individuals and groups of animals concerning their behavioral and physiological states as well as about the intentions of the participants."

The conference participants noted that relatively little was known about how olfactory signals were transmitted from the nose to the brain, compared with a wealth of available knowledge on the mechanics of visual and auditory signaling and receptor systems.

"Mammalian pheromone work is at the stage now that insect pheromone study was about a decade ago," Dr. Silverstein told the conference.

Many conference members agreed that the study of vertebrate pheromones held promise as a nonpoisonous way of controlling animals by attracting or repelling them to or from specific areas. It is also expected to be valuable to scientists for the general knowledge it will add in the fields of chemistry, biology, animal neurology and the study of olfactory systems.

Gaining Status Gateway for Airlines

By RALPH BLUMENTHAL
Special to The New York Times

June 9—As they allow their passengers a Denver flight piled international re last night, 20-year-old made for the with a pro-asked where Morrison was Stewart International Airport in New York.

As many as 3,000 charter flights a year now pass through the Bangor airport, most of them in summer. The majority carry Americans bound for Europe, but a large percentage are European charters bound for the Midwest or the West Coast. United States Customs and Immigration agents have stations here.

Complex Is Completed

The new international terminal completes a $7 million interconnected complex that includes a four-year-old domestic terminal and a $2 million, 104-room Hilton Hotel that opened last year. "The name of the same is economic spinoff," said Peter R. D'Errico, the airport manager, in a reference to related development that officials hope the airport will bring.

Bangor has pulled itself up by the bootstraps of its dwindling shoe industry and other long-time assets such as pulp and paper mills that were the area's economic mainstay. The city is completing an $11 million, 10-year effort to revitalize a deteriorating downtown core. It is preparing a three-year $1.2 million community development project to raise a slum along York St. and replace it with garden apartments.

"The city has what few others have," said Donald Donovan, manager of a General Electric turbine components plant here that took over an air base building. "Drive through 100 towns in New England, and you'll see a ghost town," he said. "That hasn't happened here. We have shopping centers, but the heart of downtown is still there."

Battle Over Airport

After taking over the air base from the Federal Government, Bangor officials contracted with Trans East Air Inc. of New Hampshire, to manage the facility as the so-called fixed base operator. But the company ran into financial difficulty. In 1972, fearful that Trans East Air would abandon the operation, the city in effect seized the airport.

At about the same time, a county grand jury indicted the Trans East chairman, Norman Kaye, on charges of embezzling $12,000 in company funds for personal use. Mr. Kaye, who is now in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., avoided trial by going out of the state. Efforts at extradition have failed.

These events led to a bitter legal battle between the city and Trans Air, resolved last week by an agreement for the city and Exxon, the airport's fuel supplier, to pay Trans Air about $1.3 million to settle its claims.

"It's all behind us now," said Merle F. Goff, the City Manager, as he told of plans for a foreign-trade zone and big air cargo buildup. "Bangor is in a position to take off in several different directions now," Mr. Goff said.

2 Students at State U. in Buffalo Slain in Off-Campus Apartment

SPECIAL TO THE NEW YORK TIMES

BUFFALO, June 9—Two students at the State University in Buffalo were slain this morning in an off-campus apartment. The police said that robbery apparently was the motive and that about $100 had been taken.

The victims were Rhona Eiseman, 20 years old, who listed home addresses in Manhattan and in Brooklyn, and Thomas E. Tunney, also 20, of Indian Lake, in the Adirondacks.

They shared an apartment on Elmwood Avenue in Buffalo's west side with Theresa Beynart of Hudson, N.Y., and Michael Shotick of Buffalo.

Miss Beynart and Mr. Shotick were not at home when Miss Eiseman and Mr. Tunney were attacked, but they arrived later and found the murderer still in the apartment, the police said. The couple recognized the intruder, who thereupon attacked both of them, the police added.

The police homicide bureau said an arrest warrant would be issued for another State University student. The bureau identified him as Larry G. Campbell, 33, a former mental patient who once had been convicted of drug possession.

Mr. Campbell, a sophomore, was on parole and was attending the college in a release program. College officials said he had not lived on campus since May 19, when the spring semester for Miss Eiseman on 83d Street in Manhattan and at had been living a few blocks south of the apartment where the murders took place.

Miss Beynart said all four victims had met Mr. Campbell about three or four times since last February and that he had visited their former apartment at least once. It was unknown, however, whether Miss Eiseman and Mr. Tunney had walked in on him during a burglary, or had accompanied Mr. Campbell in the apartment.

Miss Beynart told the police that she and Mr. Shotick found Mr. Campbell in the apartment with the other couple bound and gagged when they returned from a nearby laundry shortly after midnight.

Bound With Bedsheets

The intruder than bound them with bedsheets and placed them in a separate room, Miss Beynart said. She told the police that she could hear "pleading and choking" from other rooms in the apartment.

Shortly after 1 A.M., with the murderer still in the apartment, Miss Beynart broke free and ran to a neighborhood store. The killer heard her making an escape and chased her a short distance and then disappeared into a side street, Miss Beynart said.

The police said that the murderer victims appeared to have been strangled and that Miss Eiseman was sexually assaulted.

Mr. Shotick suffered a knife cut on the face and two stab wounds on the back, one of which appeared to have punctured a lung. He was listed in fair condition.

College records listed addresses for Miss Eiseman on 83d Street in Manhattan and at 2940 Ocean Parkway in Brooklyn, and in Florida. She had completed her junior year, majoring in human development.

Mr. Tunney, a sophomore transfer student from the State University at Fredonia, was majoring in elementary education.

Panel Would Limit Tax Bureau In Giving Data to U.S. Agencies

WASHINGTON, June 9—The power of Government agencies to collect personal information about individuals from Internal Revenue Service data should be restricted and defined by law, a Federal commission said in a report released today. The panel the Privacy Protection Study Commission, urged that the use of tax information be restricted to the purpose for which it was given by the individual—the efficient collection of revenue by the Government. Any other use of the data, the commission said, puts taxpayers at a disadvantage, because they are compelled, under threat of serious punishment, to furnish personal information in their tax returns that may be used by the Government in cases having nothing to do with the income tax. Calling the confidentiality of tax returns an "essential element in preserving the effectiveness of the tax system," the commission said that the widespread use of tax information for purposes wholly unrelated to tax administration cannot help but diminish the taxpayer's disposition to cooperate with the I.R.S. voluntarily. The commission recommended that tax information be given only to those agencies authorized by law to receive it, and that they receive only such information as they need for their purposes. Without such authorization, the commission said, no "individually identifiable data" should be released by the I.R.S. without the "prior written consent of the individual to whom it pertains." The commission further recommended that recipients of tax information be prohibited by law from "redisclosing" it. The report is a result of an eight-month study by the commission, which is charged by the Privacy Act of 1974 with reporting to the President and Congress on whether the I.R.S. should disclose personal information on taxpayers to other Government agencies.

1 in 5 Marine Recruits Held Mentally Unfit in '75

WASHINGTON, June 9 (AP)—The chief psychiatrist at the Parris Island Marine Corps Recruit Depot testified today that one out of five recruits was discharged last year for psychiatric or mental reasons. Capt. Eugene G. Evans, director of the neuro-psychiatric unit at Parris Island, said he believed that figure was far lower this year under the corps' effort to get better recruits. He appeared at a House Armed Services subcommittee hearing on abuse of recruits at boot camp. Lieut. Gen. Robert H. Barrow, deputy chief of staff for manpower, expressed belief the one out of five discharge figure for last year was too high, but he could not say what he believed to be correct figures. Captain Evans told the subcommittee that discharges for mental reasons did not have to be that high "if you have better quality recruits." Besides improving the quality of recruits, he added, the Marine Corps also is reducing the stress that led to some discharges for mental reasons.

U.S. Delays Decision on Use of Auto Air Bags Till Jan

By DIANE HENRY
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 9 — Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr. announced today that he had postponed until next January his decision on whether to require air bags on all new automobiles sold in this country.

As a result, air bags, which the automobile industry says will increase the price of an automobile by $300, could not possibly be required equipment on cars until the 1980 model year, according to Michael Browne, a special assistant to Mr. Coleman.

Mr. Coleman, who has said several times since last fall that he would make a final decision on air bags "in the near future," explained the delay by saying that the prospect of making air bags mandatory had become "increasingly controversial."

Mr. Coleman said he wanted to supervise personally a one-day public hearing on Aug. 3 and then evaluate comment from the public and industry before deciding.

The subject of air bags—which inflate upon impact and cushion the occupants of cars against the effects of crashes—has been researched and debated since 1969, when the Department of Transportation's safety experts first proposed making the devices mandatory. The experts have estimated that air bags could save as many as 8,000 lives a year.

Mr. Browne said of today's announcement that it was "very consistent with the way the Secretary likes to handle" decisions—he likes to get personally involved and personally hear what has to be said.

He denied that there were any political considerations in the delay, and noted that Mr. Coleman conducted a public hearing before he made his decision to permit landings by Concord, the controversial British-French supersonic airliner.

Representative John E. Moss, chairman of the House Commerce Oversight subcommittee, which has jurisdiction over the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the division of the Transportation Department that recommended air bags characterized Mr. Coleman's action today as "a cave-in to industry pressure."

"Impressive documentation is available that mandatory passive-restraint systems would prevent thousands of deaths and injuries," Mr. Moss said. "The delay, he went on, "substitutes procrastination for a policy of action to protect the driver."

To most engineers, passive restraint means the air bag, though there has been some experimentation with systems that automatically wrap motorists in straps.

Mr. Coleman listed alternative methods for implementation as an option, and said that it was "by no means certain" that his decision of last October, offering them, was the best.

The head of the State Insurance Department, as well as the State Safety—a Ralph J. Figures account Coleman's statement that 11,200 lives a year if sea mandatory, compared 3,000 lives saved regulations. If lag time, 11,500 lives, the figures saved, the only manufacturer ever to offer air bags.

General Motors, the only manufacturer ever to offer air bags.

Art of Packing: It's Lost on Some

Nan Kempner travels in jumpsuit, carries Vuitton bags and cases.

Eileen and Jerry Ford prefer Bill Blass and Mark Cross luggage for frequent trips.

Mark Requa has refined his luggage to carry on garment bag, small suitcase and a briefcase.

Peg Gay takes two not-full Dior bags on trips.

The perfect luggage, perfectly organized, ready to go at a moment's notice. It rarely happens, even to seasoned, and constant, travelers.

Mike Wallace spends about 40 percent of his workweek away from home, and his packing is usually done on deadline. An hour before he is due to leave for the airport, he stands in the study of his town house gazing at an empty canvas-and-leather hanging bag spread out on the sofa. The only two things he knows he's going to take are a case of dry-cleaning spray and a hairbrush.

"You can't get dry cleaning done quickly, and you don't eat properly on the road," he said.

Mr. Wallace, a CBS news correspondent and co-editor of "60 Minutes," can't explain why he doesn't keep toothbrushes, toothpaste, comb and brush packed and ready, but he doesn't. He runs into the bathroom, grabs them from the medicine chest, and throws them into a toilet kit.

Gordon Parks, photographer, poet, author, composer and director of such motion pictures as "Shaft," "The Super Cops," and "Leadbelly," scorns the use of a toilet kit. Mr. Parks travels at least half the year, and before each trip he goes into the kitchen, tears off some plastic Baggies and wraps them around his jars, bottles and toilet articles.

"I've got a lot of shaving kits, but they're too bulky," he said.

Mr. Parks is not generally concerned with bulk or weight. If he goes to the West Coast for a week, he usually takes three pieces of luggage, plus an over-the-shoulder bag as a last-minute catchall.

"I try to condense my stuff, but it doesn't work," he said, only a little ruefully.

His Gucci bags, made in Italy to his own specifications, are now 12 years old. One that always accompanies him holds a tennis racket and gear. A large soft leather bag carries coats, shirts, ties and shoes, and a third smaller case is loaded with writing materials, manuscripts and business papers. In the winter, there's an additional bag of ski clothes.

Mr. Parks describes himself as "a harum-scarum guy who knows where to put hands on anything." His wife, Genevieve Young, a vice president and editor at J.B. Lippincott, is described in somewhat different terms.

"She's systematic, and makes lists; and is really organized," he said admiringly. "She's the kind of person who knows what she is going to have for dinner next year."

Eileen Ford is also systematic. She calls herself "probably the most organized person you could ever meet."

Mrs. Ford and her husband, Jerry, head one of the most successful model agencies in the world and spend about four months a year in Europe and other areas, looking for models. The author of several books on health and beauty, she also visits various American cities for lectures and personal appearances.

"The secret in packing is knowing before you leave pretty much what you are going to be doing," Mrs. Ford said. "I even know where I'm going to eat every night during a trip—I book tables at restaurants before I leave."

Another secret, followed by many experienced travelers, is packing clothes in the plastic bags used by dry cleaners. The bags apparently keep a small column of air around folded clothes so that they don't wrinkle as much.

Mrs. Ford travels with a large Bill Blass foldover bag, fitted with four hangers. The bag also holds underwear and accessories and, usually, a Water-File corkscrew and can opener. A tote bag carried on board has two small down pillows, notepaper for thank-you notes, and needlework.

Her Own Baby Pillow

Both Fords carry extra eyeglasses and, in the winter particularly, load up on vitamins. Mr. Ford's carry-oo essentials are a dictating machine and a dozen pens. A Mark Cross two-suitcase bag and a leather case made in Rome that holds an ample supply of shirts and underwear go in with the checked luggage.

Nan Kempner's traveling "musts" are a baby pillow with extra cases (her own blanket cover and pillows) which she kept at the frequently visited St. Regis Hotel in Paris and the Connaught in London because "I sleep better with my own things around me," a lint brush and a leather case with three pairs of scissors.

Mrs. Kempner, a former fashion editor and a member-in-good-standing of the International Set, travels often to Europe to visit friends and see the collections, to the West Coast to see her family and, during the season, to the ski resorts.

"I never make lists, but I know exactly what I want and where it is," she said.

Her stockings and underwear are rolled in perfumed Lubin flannels, which serve as drawer liners when unrolled, and clothes are put in plastic cleaners' bags.

"Biggest Case There Is"

The "biggest Vuitton case there is" is taken along for a three-week trip, packed with outfits that often interchange for day and evening, a catfish for even-ings at home if she's a house guest, and stacks of cotton or silk shawls, used as sarongs at the beach, bed jackets and throws. A Vuitton shoe bag holds shoes, underwear and bathing suits, and a matching shopping bag, with cosmetics and jewelry, is carried on board.

Two of the most thrifty travelers, when it comes to luggage, are Peg Gay, a beachwear and sweater buyer at Saks Fifth Avenue, and Mark Requa, vice president of cargo sales and services for Trans World Airlines.

Miss Gay is in Europe or Hong Kong on business five times a year, and on vacation abroad twice a year. She never carries more than two moderate-sized pieces of Dior luggage, and always leaves room in the larger case for purchases and samples. She usually takes three interchangeable outfits, packable but not necessarily washable. Crasas are eliminated by hanging in a steaming bathroom. At the end of the trip, everything goes to the cleaners, plastic bottles are refilled and the essentials (including an international set of hair curlers) are ready off again.

Mr. Requa's luggage is all carry-on-board variety, to be hung up or stored under the seat. For a week away from home, it holds a couple of double-knit suits and 6 or 7 shirts.

As someone who hops on a plane the way most people hop on buses, Mr. Requa has found that airline club facilities at major airports are particularly useful for relaxing, or for business meetings during stopovers. (Club facilities, which once were granted to good customers of an airline, are now available to any traveler over 21 years for a moderate annual charge.)

Mr. Requa's other travel dictum—eat lightly. He wasn't commenting on airline food, he said.

Mike Wallat packs at Las Vegas.

Publication of French Restaurant Book Is Celebrated, of Course, With a F

By FLORA LEWIS
Special to The New York Times

LYONS, France.—Seven of France's best chefs rolled up their sleeves the other night for joint production of a meal to prove their right to a place in a new guide to France's best restaurants.

The party, to honor the book and its author, Nicolas De Garaudy, was arranged by the publisher Jean-Claude Lattes in the abbey of Paul Bocuse, a special feast house down the road from his restaurant that is used for special occasions.

Mr. Bocuse's extraordinary collection of calliopes and old-fashioned montages that are really giant music boxes thumped out polkas, waltzes and gaily tiny tunes to help prove the central point—great restaurants are about pleasure.

The book, "Guide des Meilleurs Restaurants de France," describes 22 restaurants, with menus, recipes and philosophical as well as gastronomic portraits of their chefs. Some offer elegance, some like Mr. Bocuse offer fun and some simply provide an austere absence of distraction as background for what all consider the serious business of extracting the maximum pleasure from food.

Culinary Conversation

The chefs debated the current culinary issues with 80 Paris literati and journalists at least as earnestly as politicians debate the public welfare. "La nouvelle cuisine" is a evolution to some, changing values in favor of flavor rather than rich succulence, and nonsense to others who said the best cooking remains the best cooking and always required the best ingredients.

But no one questioned the importance of eating well. The art of cuisine has evidently become one of the few remaining ramparts of nonapologetic self-indulgence and conspicuous consumption.

Mr. Bocuse, a hurly man with a proud paunch, made much of the social change affecting modern master chefs, saying that "we used to be servants, but now we are proprietors—it is a big advance."

One of the more politically minded French guests challenged his ideology, charging that "you only say that because you've become rich."

"Yes," Mr. Bocuse said, with a hint of glower and glee beneath his husky black brows. "Do you mind?"

The consumption, in any case, was both conspicuous and unrestrained. Roger Verge of Le Moulin de Mougins prepared the first course, called haisquet de homard. There wasn't a hint of a mundane bisquit, but a light fish mousse surrounding a slice of lobster, shrimp mousse and an exquisite blend of unidentifiable herbs under a wisp of a sauce.

Mr. Bocuse produced soupe de truffes V.G.E., which he invented for the luncheon at the Elisee Palace when President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing decorated him with the Legion of Honor. It's an onion soup, lighter than usual, with mounds of sliced black truffles served under a doose of paper-thin pastry that covers the individual bowls to preserve the steaming fragrance until the spoon plunges in.

Then came a salmon in sorrel sauce (escalope de saumon de Loire a l'oseille) by the Troisgros brothers Jean and Pierre, whose restaurant is in Roanne. Then a chicken steamed in a bladder with vegetables (foie de hennese nouvelle—sauce alboufere) by Alain Chapel of La Mere Charles at Monnay.

Harmony Important

By the time Jean Delaveyne of Le Camelia at Bougival served his mille-feuilles de foie gras chaud with mustard sauce, it was hard for the untrained palate and stuffed stomach to do justice to yet another of what Mr. Garaudy called the quintessential "harmony" of a great dish.

Even most of the hardened gourmets skipped the next course of "fromages de France," since cheese comes the way the cheesemaker produced it and there were the "delices et gourmandises" of Maurice Bernachon yet to come. These turned out to be first some petits fours and little tarts with raspberries that tasted straight off the bush, and mammoth chocolate chip covered beehives of chocolate cake served with barely sweetened chocolate and vanilla sherbets.

There were probably some other goodies, too, but the effect of six extraordinary dishes, five fine wines and then a Dom Perignon champagne with the dessert made it hard to focus on them.

Mr. Garaudy, visibly more relaxed after dinner than during the debate, introduced his white-touged heroes, and Mr. Bocuse took the occasion to introduce four young Lyonnais chefs.

4 for the Future

"Remember their names well," he said. "You haven't heard of them yet but in 10 years you will know all about them. They are the stars of the future, and they assure that the art will go on and on."

They were Philippe Chavent of La Tour Rose, Jean-Paul Lacombe of Léon de Lyon, Pierre Orsi of Chez Orsi and Denis Leron of Chez

Daniel et Denise, four young men in civilian dress who hadn't yet developed the roundness of the masters and apparently felt it would be impetuous to don the white hat and jacket of the profession in their presence.

But the slimmest of all was Mr. Garaudy, who said he had spent six months and $5,000 visiting and revisiting all the restaurants he described in Paris and the provinces.

"I respect my body," he had said. "I don't want a huge belly. Eating the best food in the world can kill you if you don't watch out, and I refuse to eat any other. I'll have nothing but salad for two days, but I buy at Le Notre and it's the best salad in the world even if it does cost three times as much, and then if I want a lamb sauté I'll have the best lamb sauté in the world at Lasserre's."

Can't Do Both

Mr. Garaudy said he was a total devotee of restaurants because "there isn't any good bourgeois cooking any more. Maybe some housewives still know how, but they can't get the quality products that restaurateurs get, and they don't have the time and energy to stay in the kitchen all day."

The Sound of Music Boxes

By RUTH ROBINSON

Thomas Edison's invention of the phonograph dealt a heavy blow to the music-box industry as home entertainment. Today the music box is valued mostly as a collector's item or as a gift. It shows up in antique, gift, music and toy shops as well as at department stores, but probably the best sources in New York City are G. Schirmer—which regularly stocks 250 styles of contemporary models—and Rita Ford Inc., where the emphasis is on antiques.

It was to the Ford specialty shop at Madison Avenue and 68th Street that Beverly Sills came for the French bird in a gilded cage that sang along with her in Sarah Caldwell's production of "The Barber of Seville" in Boston. Similar models are on display among the 50 or 60 antiques generally in stock here.

Mrs. Ford will at the drop of a hat give an illustrated rundown on the development of the species from the tiny movements concealed in watches, seals and lockets with which the industry began in the late 18th century in Switzerland, to the much larger models that were eclipsed in popularity around the turn of the century by the phonograph. "Everyone wanted to hear voices," she explained.

The early styles are rare today, but Mrs. Ford does carry attractive reproductions—a gold-plated locket, for example, with space for a tiny cylindrical musical movement as well as a likeness of a loved one ($120).

American boxes, a specialty within a specialty at Rita Ford, include a Chautauqua roller organ similar to the ones offered in Sears, Roebuck catalogs of the day, and a Capital cuff box, named for the shape of the interchangeable cylinders of blue enamel embellished with gold eagles.

There are plenty of contemporary boxes here too—musical seascapes and skating scenes under glass made especially for the shop, as well as more conventional boxes. Mrs. Ford's favorite is one that plays four Scott Joplin rags. If the tune a customer wants is not available, it can be ordered.

Prices at Rita Ford range from $8.50 for a small plastic Japanese model to the current ceiling of $7,500 for a choice antique, although from time to time more expensive boxes are offered.

There is something for every taste and pocketbook at G. Schirmer, 4 East 49th Street. Ornate mosque-shaped cigarette boxes with revolving doors play the theme from "The Godfather" and vie for attention with hand-carved figures that warble like birds.

Lime-green hearts with yellow or pink flowers play "Ten-limit. The amendment was rejected by voters last November.

The bill would, in effect, allow school districts and cities that were over their constitutional tax limit to lower their taxes that they levy themselves and request the state to levy a property tax for the amount required to meet operating costs.

The municipality would then apply to the State Comptroller for the money collected within their jurisdiction. It is expected that in the first year the state will return nearly $190 million in taxes collected in 67 cities and school districts. The bill would allow a municipality to increase the amount requested from the state by 5 percent each year until 1980, when it would expire.

Much of the opposition to the bill came from Republicans. They tried unsuccessfully to amend the measure to require a municipality to seek either voter approval of a request for the excess tax or the approval of the city's governing body.

Others objected to the whole concept of the bill. Assemblyman Hyman M. Miller, Republican of Fayetteville, recalled the defeat of the constitutional amendment last November.

"My response to the people in this legislation is that you don't think the people know did know what they were doing.

Others angrily accused the Democrats of drawing up the legislation of "padding" and "padding" them to attack the real problem of rapidly increasing pension costs in municipal employment.

The prospects for the bill's passage in the Republican-controlled Senate are unclear. A spokesman for Warren Anderson, the Senate's majority leader, said that many Senators felt constrained to oppose the bill because of the outcome of the November referendum. Others felt that the allowance for the 5 percent annual increase was too high.

Most observers agreed that the bill, if eventually signed into law, would be challenged in court and struck down under the Constitution's tax limitations on cities.

The House bill, sponsored by Thomas Frey, Democrat of Rochester, was greeted with little enthusiasm in the Assembly, even among its supporters. The best any could say was that it was "undesirable" but "necessary" to prevent cities and school districts around the state from falling into chaos.

There were these other developments:

WIDOW'S BILL
Mr. Carey signed a bill to allow the widow of Senator John J. Moore, a Queens Democrat who died in January, to receive the rest of his pay for the 1976 session.

LIQUEFIED NATURAL GAS
The Senate approved a measure to prohibit the storage of liquefied natural gas except with the permission of the local fire department and the State's Department of Environmental Conservation.

SCHOOL BUDGETS
A bill passed by the Senate would require that once a local school board's budget had been defeated by the voters, it could be submitted for a vote only one more time.

The Senate passed a bill which appeared destined for defeat in the Assembly, to force municipalities to pay penalties charged to the state by the Federal Government because of ineligible people receiving welfare.

Story Behind the Great Wall

By JOHN LEONARD

THE CHINESE MACHIAVELLI. 3,000 Years of Chinese Statecraft. By Dennis and Ching Ping Bloodworth. 346 pages. Farrar, Straus & Giroux. $10.

Flicking for the Book-of-the-Month Club in 1967, Gilbert Highet said of "The Chinese Looking Glass": "I never believed that anybody could equal John Gunther in writing an inside book, but Dennis Bloodworth has done it." Perhaps this was intended as praise. If so, it stands up, applying just as well to "The Chinese Machiavelli," which Mr. Bloodworth, Far East correspondent for The London Observer, has co-authored with his wife, Ching Ping Bloodworth, daughter of Sun-Yat-sen's senior personal secretary. At a pace of roughly 10 pages a century, with "the ordinary reader" in mind, "The Chinese Machiavelli" is a long march over Szechuans of anecdotes.

To arrive at exactly where? Well, at a sort of "identikit," as the Bloodworths describe it, that will help us to understand now and Mao, China as it is variously composed of leftovers from Kuan Chung (Confucius), Mn Tzu ("Little Jesus, Big Marx"), Lan Tzu (Taoism), Sun Tzu (Clausewitz without tears, circa 350 B.C.), Liu Pang, the Sleeping Dragon, many Hans and any number of power-hungry Legalists and inspired bandits and hippid parasites. Nothing in China, it seems, is without precedent, and the long imaginative arm of these precedences reduces Communism approximately to the importance of a tie-tack: "For in the stubborn, retentive race memory of the Chinese, the catch phrases of the past are carved as if in stone."

Fighting Is Most Interesting

Hsun Tzu, Shan Yang and Han Fei Tzu, 200 years before the birth of Christ, had themselves a paradigmatic police state. Man's only improvement on Sun Tzu's way of war-making is knowing how to win a protracted one. There have been peasant rebellions in the Middle Kingdom since 184 A.D. Book-burning, especially of the Confucian classics? Ch'in took time off from building the Great Wall to seed "most of the literary heritage of China up in smoke." Beethoven's sonatas are reactionary? Listen to Confucius: "Music! Music! Does it mean no more than the striking of bells and drums? If men do not understand the principle of virtue, what use is music?" Why, on the Chinese like Kissinger? He is a yu shui, a "wandering persuader" with an "Oriental ability to talk and fight simultaneously, to beguile and bomb." Who the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party refers to Liu Shao-chi as "a traitor, renegade and scab... lackey of imperialism, revisionism and the Kuomintang," as though his character were a multiple-choice test, does it seem rhetorically excessive? Listen to Mo Tzu on the Confucians two millennia ago: "They act like beggars, scold food like hamsters, ogle like be-goats, and waddle about like castrated pigs."

And so on. This constitutes, of course, reductionism gone on a bender. It can be entertaining, it is more often vulgar. Of the three sections into which "The Chinese Machiavelli" is divided—"Thinking,"

"Fighting" and "Ruling"—"Fighting" strikes me as the most interesting, perhaps because my professor of Chinese history, Joseph R. Levenson at the University of California at Berkeley, rather neglected military tactics; "Ruling" seems the most tendentious huffing and puffing too much on the parallel bars and "Thinking" is the most vulgar, a digest of Chinese philosophy that might have been conspired at by Will Durant and Dr. David Rubin. What, really, are we to make of a discussion of Taoist "flexibility" that yields this explanation of the Cultural Revolution:

"In 1958 Chairman Mao launched the 'Great Leap Forward'... The Leap turned into a stumble, farm output fell heavily, industry was dislocated, and many provinces suffered three years of misery and near famine. Mao resigned as President of the Republic, and Liu Shao-chi took his place. Mao was discontented with the more pragmatic, less radical policies of Liu, however, and in 1965 lit the fuse of his 'Great Cultural Revolution,' in which Liu was disgraced and sacked and the whole Communist Party hierarchy smashed. For this political massacre Mao relied for military support on Marshal Lin Biao, the Minister of Defense. Lin became Mao's closest aide-in-arms, and in April 1969 his name was inscribed in a new draft constitution as the Chairman's heir-designate.

"Fate and his own fallings were nonetheless working against Lin Biao, and two years later he was dead and damned by those who had only yesterday hailed him as their future chief. By 1972 the generale and administrators in the Communist bureaucracy who had been humiliated and pitched out of office five years before were back to their commands and corridors of power, while the left-wing Red Guards who had earlier scarified them so vindictively were down on the farms, shoveling muck with the peasants."

So Much Not Enough

In this "tragicomedy," we are told, the Taoist was Chou En-lai. So much for the Cultural Revolution, which sent Western intellectuals off to play with their typewriter keys as though they were worry-beads, and during which tens of thousands of Chinese happened to get dead, a modest number, of course, given the precedents. So much is not enough here.

There are, nevertheless, two things to be said in behalf of "The Chinese Machiavelli." The first is that, as a compost of anecdotes, it continues the humanizing work begun by the TV cameras that followed Mr. Nixon to Peking; how amazing, really, that China was colorful. One had thought, on the basis of old movies and the televised Korean War, that all was a pulpy gray, that the long-running civilization in the history of Earth's Broadway wore nothing but fatigues. Now we know: we have neon, they have poster art.

Secondly, the Bloodworths in their retelling of Chinese statecraft make clear that the "mandarinate," the sage-for-hire, is as old as politics and nationhood. The intellectual who can be bought was not, as we may have imagined, invented in 1960.

FEDORA. Her enigma unriddled—the greatest, the most exquisite, the longest-reigning Hollywood star of them all. And the most secretive. Her stardom enduring from the 1920's (temptress of the silent screen) through decades of the talkies; her glorious face untouched by time...

LORNA. "The All-American Cookie." Cuddly, appealing. Zooming from high-school cheerleader to sex goddess. Suddenly middle-aged and falling apart. Many jobs behind her, many men, much trouble. Now she has come to a remote Mexican resort to find—to heal—herself...

BOBBITT. He was a star at 10. America's charming, winsome fantasy child. Top Box Office nationwide. Now he's in his 30's and as winsome as ever. But today the Bobbitt movies are forgotten. And Bobbitt himself—does he exist at all?

WILLIE. For decades a worldwide symbol of elegance and wit. Now he is alone in his showplace Hollywood villa—his precious "Bee" dead, her ashes in a golden urn on the mantel—mourning the past. Until suddenly, viciously, with a knock on the door, the future breaks in...

"Pauline Kael's best collection..."

"This is Pauline Kael's best collection... reviews so audacious and passionate that critics across the country lined up to dispute them, as well as the movies they analyzed. These are the works that kept Ms. Kael at the center of controversy and confirmed her position as the best movie critic in the United States—for my money, the best critic, period."

—Richard Christiansen, Chicago Daily News

"To say that Pauline Kael is the best practicing movie critic is to say nothing new... No movie critic assumes a context as broad as Kael does; no other critic uses so many resources in the attempt to make sense out of a movie; no critic is as involved in the adventure. Reeling offers a critic who can write; who has a vast and visceral knowledge not only of movies but of books, music, history and politics; who combines a desire to understand the constant shifts in fads, fashions and social beliefs with remarkable sensitivity to questions of value; who has a sense of humor; and who has a s---detector that is beyond belief."

"Poised to recognize achievement, she is as eager to embrace talent as some others are to revile it."

"The Bernard Shaw of movie critics. She's better, really... Her passion for movies, her disgust at pretension, vulgarity, ineptness in the making of movies as well as her sheer delight when something works well is infectious. Kael has brought film criticism, never the most elegant of trades, to an art form."

"The movies are lucky to have her as a critic, and moviegoers even luckier."

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y.—The unique excellence of television is also its tragic flaw. It captures the present only to become a captive of the present. With a childlike sense of wonder at the flashing moment, it is plagued with a child's short attention span.

for suddenness, secrecy and crude disregard of allies. The most likely possibilities in a Carter Administration are George Ball and Cyrus Vance. Both have emphasized the need to be steady, to choose long-term goals, to eschew sudden opportunism, to respect allies.

When post-industrial society took the myth and televised it throughout the world, it compressed that length of time into an instant. Now there was no more time; it was happening now, and the individual was being passed over. The cry for action became desperate as television began to incite "the revolution of rising expectations" all over the world.

A wonderful heat wave. Our revenues are rising. For the first six months of '76 advertising revenues are up 19% over last year. For July alone, we're up a red hot 26%. And the rest of the year looks just as sunny. It isn't surprising. Because we've got higher concentration of young men 18 to 24 and 18 to 34 than any other male magazine.* They're the faster crowd. The crowd more and more advertisers are catching up with in our. Because our's got 1,297,000 male readers 18 to 24 and 2,494,000 18 to 34. And our gives you the lowest black and white CPM for the faster crowd. With numbers like these, we could say we own them. But nobody owns them. The best you can do is keep up with them. And our certainly can. OU First with a faster crowd.

Day-Care Centers Lose Fight Over Violations

By PETER KHSS
 Immediately reached for comment, J. Gold... The Brooklyn building is the site of three day-care centers... The Park Slope Child Care Collective, which charged that its day-care center was losing city funds because of its cooperation in an investigation of possible favoritism in the lease... Commissioner Scoppetta said that the center was one of 49 losing its financing because of budget constraints, and that this had no relation to his investigation... Of 391 day-care centers currently receiving $150 million a year in city, state and Federal funds, 169 are in the direct-lease program, which involves $18 million a year in rents and real-estate taxes paid by the city through the Agency for Child Development... Hadley Gold, an assistant corporation counsel in charge of the Law Department's housing and real-estate division, said he was holding up processing of leases for six projects because of the budget situation, although they were approved by the Board of Estimate last summer and fall... Four, he said, are for projects of the state's Urban Development Corporation, one is for the 119th Housing Corporation in Manhattan and one is for a center at 18-40 20th Avenue in Astoria, Queens... The notices from Comptroller Goldin announcing the rent-payment suspensions went out to landlords owning premises at 581 Livonia Avenue, Brooklyn, with reported serious flooding problems; 16-20 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, with serious roof leaks and lack of ventilation in one windowless wing; and 3001 West 37th Street, Brooklyn, lacking a required concrete roof surface, thus making 8,000 square feet of golded-for space unusable... Mr. Goldin said his engineers were making inspections that might lead to further suspensions of city rent payments. He said the building deficiencies involved in yesterday's actions had "produced serious operating problems..." He Comptroller asserted that the "deplorable building conditions have gone uncorrected despite the knowledge of the landlords and the Agency for Child Development..." The Human Resources Administrator, J. Henry Smith, said that rent payments were suspended for 15 centers last January until violations were cleared up, and that a similar action against one center was taken in April 1975.

At Rockefeller University, Graduation Is Ph. D.-Day

By RICHARD SEVERO
 The well-ordered, disciplined anarchy that is Rockefeller University graduated 17 Ph.D.'s yesterday and celebrated its 75th anniversary in yet another demonstration of the adage that the best things in life are free... The university is free in every important sense of the word, despite its annual $1.5 million deficit. Its graduating students were all on full academic fellowships, and the professors who taught them were free to scorn narrow academic warrens that suggest one should teach and do research only in the field of his doctorate... In the 15-acre enclave, in the East 60's, hard against the East River, changing disciplines is not only tolerated it is encouraged and even applauded... "Our system may look scatter-shot," said Rodney W. Nichols, a university vice president, "but there is more unity than it would appear..." Thus, the university's 1,000-acre Field Research Center for Ecology and Ethology in Millbrook, N. Y., 100 miles north of Manhattan, is doing research on how young birds learn their songs, while in Manhattan, other scientists seek to discover how children learn languages... The question being asked in both places is whether there might be a relationship between the two learning processes, one that might help man to understand how the brain works... The researchers are asking why it is that if birds do not learn their songs during a certain period of development they do not learn them at all and why humans frequently find it so difficult to learn a new language, once they are past a certain age... What Is Creativity? This phase of the learning process is an enigma that might well be applied to artistic creativity—why a painter might rely on the same spectrum of shapes, colors and design patterns or why even a great composer may utilize the same harmonic progressions throughout his most active period, no matter how he may try to push back the constraints of the physics and mathematics that underlie the principles he had been taught... The questions seem almost childlike in their innocence, but the answers are excruciatingly difficult to find, for in science, as in life, the clearest answers lead only to more questions... There are only around 100 graduate students at any given time at Rockefeller University, along with nearly 400 professors. On one occasion, there were 128 and some of the professors began to complain it was too much... "It is a great satisfaction to see your students do very well," said Dr. Neal E. Miller, a physiological psychologist, "and young graduate students keep you on your toes. But if you get too many of them it burdens you—you can't get your own work done..." There would appear to be no paucity of work done. The campus has provided working space for 16 Nobel Prize winners since the university opened in 1901, nine of them for work they did at the university. Six Nobel Prize winners are currently on the faculty, which has a program it warmly embraces as "overtly elitist..." "The overwhelming characteristic here is the following of problems down to the bottom," said the university's president, Dr. Frederick Seitz. "We are not interested in an intermediate or applied solution..." Even so, it was here that research was done that led to the establishment of the first blood bank and the discovery that cancer is caused by a virus—all more than half a century ago... The university's work in immunology is world renowned, and it was at Rockefeller that the most definitive experiments were conducted on methadone, a drug used in the treatment of heroin addicts... Only Team for Chess Among the current projects are the exploration of the way cells "grow, communicate and specialize" to provide more understanding of degenerative diseases such as cancer; employing clinical studies to attack genetic disorders, such as diabetes and sickle cell anemia; studies of environmental damage caused by the toxic chemical PCB's, which is at dangerous levels in many waters, including the Hudson, and research on such diseases as rheumatoid arthritis, lymphatic leukemia, multiple sclerosis and rheumatic fever... There was no commencement speaker yesterday following a long tradition, and although the day marked the first official reunion alumni have had since the university was organized, none of the activities associated with college reunions was visible... There was certainly no reminiscing over athletic prowess, since the only intercollegiate team competition recognized at the university is chess. Each of the 14 men and three women receiving degrees was introduced by a professor who had worked with the Ph. D., and the introductions also said much about the university... Ivan M. Lieberburg of North Belmore, L.L., who has worked in Central America, Gabon and Bermuda studying tropical reef fish, African army ants and West African fruit bats, did his doctoral research in the "biochemical interactions of gonadal steroid hormones within the brain..." Ruth Allison Ryan of South Hadley, Mass., whose interest is philosophy, wrote her thesis on "the conceptual problems that arise in formulating, testing and applying nomological generalizations that connect physiological concepts with psychological concepts..." And when Elizabeth Dickson of Shawville, Quebec, received her doctorate, Prof. Hugh D. Robertson said, "I should congratulate her for being, as far as any of us know, the first person to master both hybridization and sequencing techniques and live to tell about it..." A $200,000 grant from John D. Rockefeller Sr. gave the university its start and the Rockefeller family have given millions more over the years. Of present family members, David Rockefeller is closest to the university. Nelson A. Rockefeller is remembered for selling it some rabbits when he was a teen-ager and in need of pocket money... Donations are hard to come by these days. "I suppose that when a Rockefeller has a name like Rockefeller, it makes it a bit more difficult to raise money," Dr. Miller said.

BAN IS REMOVED ON VISITS TO CHILD

Court Rules Bronx Couple Can See Grandson. Even Though Mother Objects

By MAX H. SEIGEL
 Declaring that "visits with a grandparent are often a precious part of a child's experience," the Appellate Division of New York Supreme Court in Brooklyn has overturned a lower-court ruling that had denied a Bronx couple access to their 7-year-old grandchild... "Animosity between the mother of the children and their grandparents," the Appellate Division held, "is not a proper basis for the denial of visitation privileges to the grandparents, nor is it a proper yardstick by which to measure the best interests of the children..." The grandparents—Gabriel Vacula and his wife had not seen their granddaughter, Amy, for three and a half years... Their son, Robert, divorced his wife in 1971 and died in an automobile accident three years later. Testimony at the trial in State Supreme Court in Nassau County disclosed that Amy's mother had been bitter about the divorce and that her animosity toward her former husband had carried over to his parents... Mother Remarried The mother, Carolyn James Blume, who remarried and moved to New Jersey, had rebuffed all efforts by the grandparents to maintain contact with Amy, even to the extent of returning unopened birthday and Christmas gifts they had sent to her... The Appellate Division took note of a decision handed down by a court in New Jersey, which said: "There are benefits which devolve upon the grandchild from the relationship with his grandparents, which he cannot derive from any other relationship. Neither the Legislature nor the court is blind to the human truths which grandparents and grandchildren have always known..." Edwin S. Shapiro, the lawyer for the grandparents, said: "They are extremely anxious about seeing Amy again. It has been a long, hard time for them..." When Mr. Shapiro initiated the court action shortly after the Vacula's son died, he could not locate the child or her mother, so the legal papers had to be served on Mrs. Blume's lawyer and her parents. They were ordered by Justice William J. Sullivan of State Supreme Court in Nassau County to disclose where Mrs. Blume and the child were living. It was revealed that they were living with her husband in Massapequa, L. I... In overturning the lower-court ruling, the Appellate Division directed the court to establish visitation privileges for the grandparents and to set the conditions surrounding the visits... Miss Quinlan Taken To a Nursing Home Run by Welfare Unit Karen Ann Quinlan was moved last night from St. Clare's Hospital in Doeville, N.J., where she has lain in a coma for more than a year, to the Morris View Nursing Home in Morris Plains, N.J... The 22-year-old woman was accompanied by her parents and their attorneys, Paul W. Armstrong and James Growley, and several volunteers who carried her into and out of an ambulance... Miss Quinlan was not connected to a respirator and witnessed saw no signs of any mechanical life-supporting devices as the young woman was carried into the 370-bed nursing home for indigent patients... Miss Quinlan is the first comatose patient admitted to the nursing home, which is operated by the Morris County Welfare Board. Dr. Richard M. Watson, director of medical services at Morris View, said that despite Miss Quinlan's condition, "the philosophy of care will be the same as for any other patient..." The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Quinlan, transferred their daughter from St. Clare's because, they said, they believed that the hospital and Miss Quinlan's former attending physician would use every means at their disposal to keep the young woman alive despite the State Supreme Court ruling on March 31 that granted the family's petition for removal of her life-sustaining medical system so that she could "die with dignity..." Dr. Watson said that Miss Quinlan would continue to be fed through tubes inserted through her nose into her stomach, and would receive medication and ancillary care to maintain her present condition... However, he said he thought it would be inappropriate to use "aggressive" medical procedures to bring Miss Quinlan through some "major, acute intervening crisis" and return her to "a state that is unacceptable to be human..."

Brass Players entertaining strollers in Central Park yesterday

By FRANK J. FRIAL
 John Mueller was shooting the interior of St. Patrick's Cathedral at one-quarter of a second at 12. Walter Joseph was listening to a steel-drum player in Times Square run through "Strangers in the Night" and Bernard Ianelli, squinting into the afternoon sun, was waiting for his chance to board a Circle Line boat for a cruise around Manhattan... The peak tourist season in New York is several weeks away, but it was difficult to believe that yesterday. The city teemed with tourists and conventioners—to the delight of the people who wait on and sell to them and to the surprise of some, who had said the city and its tourist business were in trouble... The Convention and Visitors Bureau was telling callers that there were only four midtown hotels with any rooms and that those rooms were going fast. The hotels were the McAlpin, the George Washington, the Empire and the Dble... And if the hotel situation was tight, the bench situation in Paley Park was tighter. It was S.R.O. in the pocket park off Fifth Avenue on 53d Street almost all of a day that saw the mercury soar to 91 degrees... "Tourists?" said Jasper Greene, the park's guard since it opened in 1967. "We get so many tourists, the regulars get mad..." A Popular Park Mr. Greene strode off to warn three German children not to get too close to the waterfall, then pointed out some of his regulars. "The lady in the yellow gloves," he said, nodding in her direction. "She's been coming since the park opened and on good days she'll spend six, seven hours here..." European and Asian visitors arrive looking for the park, Mr. Greene said. "They know about it long before they get here," he said... At Saks Fifth Avenue, saleswomen and customers alike confirmed the fact that a substantial part of the store's walk-in business was with tourists, particularly foreign visitors. "I guess there are more languages spoken around here than at the U.N.," said a saleswoman selling men's ties... Many of the people tramping around midtown Manhattan yesterday where the wives and families of the men attending the seven major and half a dozen smaller conventions going on in New York at present... Snap Judgment "The National Computer Conference and Exhibitoo has practically filled up the New York Hilton, the Americana, the Waldorf-Astoria, the Roosevelt and the Sheraton," a woman at the Convention Bureau said... Mr. Mueller was one of probably a dozen tourists trying to take photographs in the cool gloom of St. Patrick's Cathedral. Moreover, he was probably one of the few who would have any pictures to show for his effort. He teaches photography at a junior college in River Grove, Ill., near Chicago... Mr. Ianelli, in the United States on a two-week trip from Paris, said he planned to make both the round-Manhattan trip and the voyage to the Statue of Liberty. Had he tried to visit Liberty Island before 2 P.M. yesterday, he would have been turned away... Hundreds of tourists who had planned visits to Liberty or Ellis Island were stopped at the embarkation point near the Battery because 15 members of Vietnam Veterans Against the War had chained themselves the night before to a gate at Liberty Island to protest cutbacks in veterans' benefits... The demonstrators were taken from the island by National Park Service officers shortly after noon, and boat service to the two islands was resumed at 2 P.M.

2 Youths Plead Guilty to Robbery
 Two youths accused of the murder and robbery of Roger Hane, a magazine illustrator who was fatally beaten by six bicycle thieves as he rode in Central Park two years ago, interrupted their trial in New York State Supreme Court to plead guilty to robbery charges. Paul Flaxman, the prosecutor, recommended that Justice Joseph Martin accept the plea, which calls for a 25-year prison term, because the youths, Luis Colao and Ivan Gonzales, both now 18 years old, were not the actual killers. The real killers, Mr. Flaxman said, were two 15-year-olds who have been sent to a state reformatory for three years, the maximum for juveniles under state law. The juveniles are eligible for parole this September, authorities said.

4 'Massage Parlor' Managers Arrested
 Four more "massage parlor" managers were arrested yesterday following raids that started last weekend on massage parlors and alleged brothels in the midtown area. Robert M. Morgenthau, the Manhattan District Attorney, identified the four as Troy Sullivan, 28 years old, of the Leisure Spa, Eighth Avenue and 43d Street; Ed Marra, 44, of the Eros Leisure and Health Spa, 35 West 34th Street; Samuel Walls, 34, of the Hideaway Massage Parlor, 106 West 45th Street, and Philip Rosenbloom, 37, of the Maison de Soi, 154 East 33d Street. Thus far 20 managers of alleged brothels and massage parlors have been indicted in what authorities called Operation Broadsword.

Rapist Gets 12½ to 25 Years in Prison
 Justice Joseph Sullivan of State Supreme Court in the Bronx sentenced a 43-year-old rapist to the maximum 12½ to 25 years in prison to show that "raping women in ghetto neighborhoods will be met with the severest sentences." He sentenced James Warner of 298 East 134th Street, who has a record of 19 previous arrests on burglary charges. District Attorney Mario Merola of the Bronx said the assault took place at 5:30 A.M. last Aug. 5 in an apartment at 190 West Burnside Avenue, in the Morris Heights section. He said the defendant raped a 22-year-old woman and then ransacked her apartment, which he entered by a fire escape.

From the Police Blotter:
 Two brothers from Queens were shot, one of them fatally, in the Burger King restaurant at 2331 Eighth Avenue, at 125th Street. The police identified the dead man as Herbert Johnson, 30 years old, of 109-61 173d Street, Jamaica. His brother, Ted, 29, of 104-46 62d Road, Rego Park, was in serious condition at Harlem Hospital. The police said they knew of no motive for the shootings... A man identified only as Ronald Hill, 33, of Balimore, was shot to death at Eighth Avenue and 118th Street. The gunman escaped... An unidentified man was shot in front of 610 West 141st Street, and was pronounced dead on arrival at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center. The killer got away.

rey-Brown Victory sey Is Called Futile

By RONALD SULLIVAN
 ers in New Jersey or simply stumbled, out of con- yesterday that, in a surprise turn of events, victory for the incumbent Democrat, Governor Brown, was apparently not so certain.

For example, in Essex County, the ballot was so crowded with rival delegates that the one committed to Gov. Brown was moved into the Row A position that was reserved for a vote count-regular party organization's local candidates.

As a consequence, Governor Wallace nearly won the delegate race in the virtually all-black central Ward district in Newark.

But both sides in the election conceded there were no villains seeking an edge on the ballot at the expense of a rival. This is because ballot position in the primary segment was decided by lot and then arranged crazy quill so that everyone could be squeezed in on one machine.

Others said that the Democratic organization in places like Hudson, Camden and Middlesex Counties had recovered from the inertia that has gripped them over the last few elections. They produced big pluralities for the uncommitted slate.

Brown's Success
 In Jersey City, Democratic leaders likened the uncommitted campaign there to political maneuvering, shaping up the machine for a run at Governor Byrne in next year's primary.

Such defections are potentially more damaging to the Republicans than to the Democrats because, as a minority party, Republicans have traditionally depended on winning Presidential elections has averaged only 6 percent.

McCarty Says Nomination Of Carter Is Not Inevitable

Tunney and Hayakawa Win in California

By WALLACE TURNER
Special to The New York Times
LOS ANGELES, June 9—Democratic Senator John V. Tunney was reelected easily yesterday, and will run against Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, a former Democrat, who was nominated by the Republicans.

he said, "and they credited me with saving civilization."
In the view of many political observers Dr. Hayakawa's victory came because the vote of Republican regulars was divided.

though Mr. Bell, a wealthy man, reported spending $681,000 of his own money. Mr. Finch spent about $500,000, and Dr. Hayakawa spent about $100,000. Mr. Harmer started late and spent little.

Helstoski Gains on Absentee Ballots

Democrats Choose Metzbaum To Oppose Taft for Senate Seat

By WILLIAM K. STEVENS
Special to The New York Times
COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 9—While the Ford and Carter Presidential tides rolled across Ohio yesterday, Democratic voters propelled former United States Senator Howard Metzbaum into a one-on-one race against Robert Taft Jr. Mr. Taft, the state's incumbent Republican Senator, was unopposed in the primary.

Mr. Metzbaum, a Cleveland businessman, has ridden something of a seasaw in Ohio senatorial politics over the last six years. In 1970, he defeated John Glenn, the former astronaut, for the Democratic nomination. But he lost narrowly to Senator Taft.

LAIRD PREDICTING PLATFORM FIGHT

Battle by G.O.P.'s Right Is Seen by Ford Adviser
By CHRISTOPHER LYDON
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, June 9—Melvin R. Laird said today, on behalf of President Ford, that the Republican Presidential nomination was as good as won, and he tried to warn Ronald Reagan's followers against a divisive fight over the party platform.

From Carter to Economy
The main points of Mr. Laird's advice to Mr. Ford, shared with reporters over breakfast, were these: "I do not believe any Republican will be elected because they were an integral part of the Presidential campaign and could not be expected to take uncoordinated political action."

G.O.P. Committee Challenging Limits on Spending by Nominees

By WARREN WEAVER Jr.
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, June 9—The Republican National Committee maintained today that it could spend unlimited amounts of money to support the general election campaign of its Presidential candidate, despite ceilings imposed by Congress in the 1974 campaign law.

Opposite View
Stuart E. Seigel, counsel of the Democratic National Committee, took the opposite position. He said national party committees should not be permitted to spend money because they were an integral part of the Presidential campaign and could not be expected to take uncoordinated political action.

West Pointer Gets Medal

IN June 9 (AP)—James West Pointer who was not treated by fellow his exonerated of cheating won an Army Commendation Medal...

The 24-year-old lieutenant, who is from New York City, has been in West Berlin since October 1973. In his junior year at the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., he was found guilty by a cadet honor committee of cheating on an examination...

right at the side—that they not only made the production difficult to assess, but also revealed dangerous deficiencies in the signposts of the 'Avon Stage. (Perhaps critics should be given bad seat locations more often. We are frequently overemphered in comparison with the general public.) However, the performance was clearly more than adequate. Mr. Hutt's own Prospero suffers from a certain mellifluousness. Some Prosperos suggest the lingering madness of a burned-out poet, and at best, Mr. Hutt, despite his commanding figure and avuncular presence, suggested more retirement than resignation.

A re-examination of Reggie Jackson's right wrist showed no fracture, but the slumping Baltimore Orioles' slugger will be sidelined for at least a few days. Originally, X-rays had indicated a possible cracked bone, but that has been discounted by an orthopedic specialist. The doctor described the injury as a sprain, and said the lines of the X-ray were from previous sprains that had healed. Since joining the Orioles on May 2 after holding out for a month following his acquisition in a trade with the Oakland A's, Jackson is batting .205. He had had only two hits in his last 26 times at bat.

of an apparent weakening by the pianist in the strenuous trill sections. Mr. Serkin began the movement in a muted, solemn fashion and the variations flowered from there on with an almost biological inevitability. Because he is not essentially a great colorist or a master of Slavic rubato, Mr. Serkin always surprises one with how exciting he can make the Chopin preludes. In some ways, he distorted the sense of a couple of the more ephemeral pieces, but the coruscating preludes such as No. 16 and the ones in which Chopin raises his voice, meaningfully, such as the hazy No. 20, brought out the poetic fire in Mr. Serkin. Again, there were a few wrong or dropped notes, and a glossed-over trill or two in the heat of No. 24, but the integrity of the line was always there. Mr. Serkin, in spite of his long American residence, is one of those Middle European-bread pianists who take music so seriously that a recital such as this one exudes a faintly religious aura. The same evangelical ardor could be felt coursing through Mr. Serkin's performance of Mendelssohn's Prelude and Fugue in E minor. His playing of the prelude, though scaled down in tone, had marvelous agitation, and the fugue was treated as respectfully as if it were top-drawer Beethoven. An older scholar of Mendelssohn players might have found it all rather granitic and lacking in charm, but Mr. Serkin's way was grandly convincing.

Lee MacPhail, the president of the American League, has fined Rocky Colavito, the Cleveland Indians' coach, $100 and suspended him for three days effective tomorrow. The penalties are for "his physical contact" with Umpire Rich Garcia in last Sunday's game against the Chicago White Sox. Frank Robinson, the Indians' manager, and Jeff Torberg, a coach, were ejected from the game along with Colavito. "It's just another in a series of problems we've had with that umpire crew," said an Indians spokesman. Garcia, Bill Kunkel, Dave Phillips and Lou DiMura have ejected 12 Indian players in 17 games. Britain's Curtis Cup team, which consists of that nation's leading women amateur golfers will meet the United States team tomorrow in Curtis Cup competition at Lancaster, England, overloaded with weight. Stephane Grappelli Has Fiddle Power At Reno Sweeney

By JOHN S. WILSON
Stephane Grappelli looks like Alec B. Francis playing the Old Music Master these days—a sharp, lean profile, with the few wisps of hair left on top of his head flourishing into silvery gray strands that sweep down over his collar. But, at 68, the direct sweeping attack that he showed on violin when he played with Django Reinhardt in the Quintet of the Hot Club of France 20 years ago is still present, and if anything, has gain in power during the years that he has performed on his own. At Reno Sweeney, where he is appearing this week (the first jazz instrumentalist ever featured at the West Side Street), Mr. Grappelli is sweeping through the kind of pop tunes that he has been playing for years—"This Can't Be Love," "These Foolish Things," "Tea for Two," Reinhardt's "Manoir de Mes Reves"—with a trio made up of two acoustic guitars (Diz Dwyer and Ike Isaacs) and an acoustic bass (Brian Torff) that suggests the supporting sound of the old Hot Club Quintet without making any effort to copy it. Mr. Grappelli's jaunty swinging style has an airy buoyant quality that sets him apart from other jazz violinists—the rough barrelhouse fiddle of Stuff Smith, for example, or the rambunctiousness of Joe Venuti. His special contribution is a suggestion of elegance that effectively complements the high-spirited context of his performances.

Orr Joins Hawks, but His Knee Is Doubtful

By PARTON KEENE

Special to The New York Times
MONTREAL, June 9—Bobby Orr agreed today to accept the terms offered by the Chicago Black Hawks' hockey team.
Though the financial arrangements and other details will not be released until Orr officially signs the contract, his agent said the agreement covered several years, concerned business and hockey employment and was not conditional on Orr's being able to play.

Early in the negotiations, William A. Wirtz, president of the Black Hawks, had been reported saying he was prepared to offer Orr $3 million on a multiyear contract. But neither Paul A. Mooney, president of the Boston Bruins, nor Alan Eagleson, Orr's agent, would comment on the figure agreed on.
"Whether it's six years for $3 million or three years for $8 million," Eagleson said, "I'm not here to discuss the money Orr will get. You'll be told everything when Bobby signs the pact soon in Chicago."

The 28-year-old Orr, who became the game's most acclaimed defenseman in a 10-year career with the Bruins and achieved free-agent status last week, flew here last night to complete lengthy negotiations. This morning he left for Toronto General Hospital, where he was to undergo examination of his damaged left knee and learn whether he would be able to play again.
According to Eagleson, the Bruins made a last-ditch effort to bring Orr back to Boston, but Orr said that new business interests he had in the Midwest precluded such a move.
"Since our last offer near the end of 1975 was declined by the Bruins," Eagleson said, "Bobby has developed other business interests which require him to be located in the Midwestern section of the United States."
"But Bobby asked me to say for him that he hates to leave Boston, where he spent the best 10 years of his life and where he will always feel in debt to the fans, his coaches and former teammates."

Eagleson said the Bruins reneged on an agreement reached in September 1975 by which he said Orr would have been paid $295,000 a year for five years, plus a lump sum of $925,000 to be paid in June 1980. As an alternative, he said Orr was to have taken an 18.5 percent ownership in the team.
A few days later, Eagleson said, he asked the Jacobs brothers (owners of the Bruins) to amend the lump-sum figure as $185,000 a year for five years. They agreed, he said, but 48 hours later, according to him, the brothers called to say there had been a misunderstanding, and the deal was off.
The agreement between Orr and the Hawks also specified that compensation for Boston would be worked out between the teams in collective bargaining, and that the National Hockey League's arbitration procedures would be waived.

The N.H.L. requires a team signing a free agent to compensate his former team in a mutually satisfactory way through players, cash or both.
Tommy Ivan, the Hawks' general manager, said that compensation would be worked out after the medical report on Orr, which might lead to a sixth operation on his knee. But no players will change hands, he added, until Orr "plays for us and we see what kind of an Orr we're getting."
"There will be no deferment of compensation, though," asserted Eagleson. "It's cash on the barrelhead. If Bobby plays in Chicago as if he were 100 percent, then compensation would have to be three, four or five players of high caliber."
"But if he doesn't turn out to be the Orr of, say, 1974 or earlier, then the position of compensation would be adjusted accordingly."

Panatta Topples Mets, Dibbs Wins Ponder Trades

By FRED TUPPER

Special to The New York Times
-The jinx as a hero here from last year, when he came from a point set to take six games in a row and beat Raul Ramirez of Mexico.
Panatta and Dibbs are men on the move. Panatta recently won the Italian title, and the week before that the Brooklyn-born Dibbs took his third West German title in four years, beating Orantes there, too, by 6-1 in the fifth set.
It was not entirely the Dibbs style that an overflowing center-court crowd of 13,000 saw on this steaming afternoon with the temperate flirting with the '90's. Normally Eddie stays back, but today he was drawn from his lair by the tactics of Orantes, who, unable to make any impression with his lov-

"Bobby Orr has been to Boston... like Paul Revere's house or the Bunker Hill monument."

Hockey's No. 1 Star Robert Gordon Orr

By TONY KORNEISER
Over the last 10 years, with the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, Orr applied that understanding in a way that has made him a millionaire and an idol. And it has made him so much a part of Boston that yesterday, when he announced his intention to play for the Chicago Black Hawks, a dejected Mayor Kevin White said:
"Bobby Orr has been to Boston: the equivalent of a great natural or historical resource, like Paul Revere's house or the Bunker Hill monument. Some things can't be replaced, and obviously he will be missed."
At 28, Orr, clearly, has been accorded the kind of stature usually reserved for men far older and more accomplished in pursuits other than skating up and down an ice rink and putting hard rubber disks beyond goal-tenders. But Orr's contribution to hockey is that he

Yankees Top Angels, 4-3; Martin Ejected From Game

By MURRAY CHASS

Billy Martin was ejected for the first time this season last night and the Yankees created a possible controversy with the American League office over their showing of a replay of the call that led to Martin's early dismissal.
Despite Martin's absence, the Yankees won, 4-3, with Oscar Gamble singling home the run that gave Catfish Hunter his seventh victory.
The play that stirred Martin and Yankee fans occurred in the third inning. With two out and Oscar Gamble at third in the scoreless game, speedy Mickey Rivers hit a grounder toward second.

Jerry Remy fielded the ball and, according to Umpire Larry McCoy, threw Rivers out at first for the third out.
Elston Howard, the first-base coach, disagreed with McCoy and started to tell him so. Magin hopped out of the dugout and raced to McCoy to tell him that he, too, disagreed with the call. His views naturally took precedence over Howard's and he elbowed his coach out of the way.
The manager argued vehemently for a minute, then whipped off his hat and flung it to the ground. For the next part of his act, he kicked dirt onto McCoy's blue slacks. Then he kicked dirt again and again, three times in all, and his aim was unerring each time.

Somewhere between the first and the third kick, McCoy told Martin he had to leave the game and take his dirt-kicking act elsewhere.
Martin, whose love for umpires rivals George Steinbrenner's feelings about his players' long hair, grew even more tempestuous at the ejection and this time Howard pushed him away from McCoy. Bill Haller, the third-base umpire, also came over and restrained the manager from getting as close to McCoy as he wanted to.

Number of winners he thought he had. One was later disqualified.

What Frazier likes to call their "attack" has been markedly ineffective in the losing slugout. In the last 10 games, the Mets have scored 58 runs, but 24 of the runs came in runaway victories of 11-0 and 13-2.
"I've never seen anything like it," Frazier, grumbled in his chair and staring at the floor.
"We can't get no runs, or we get 'em all at one time. Win one game, lose five."
One victim of mis-support last night was Mickey Lolich, who lost his fifth game in a row and extended his record with the Mets to a depressing 2-8. In the last six games, Lolich has started, he has given up 10 earned runs, but the Mets have been able to score only six runs for him.
"If I'd had some runs to work with, I could be 7-3," the left-hander said.
Lolich gave up only one hit in five innings last night, but could get no one out in the sixth. Dave Bristol, who was deposited in the other team's goal.

Daye Anderson: Randy Jones Wins Without a Fastball

Not long ago the other pitchers on the San Diego Padres were listening to their coach, Roger Craig, talk about how to work differently on various hitters when Randy Jones joined the group.
"You don't have to listen to this," one of his teammates told him, "you pitch everybody the same way."
Randy Jones laughed. Randy Jones throws a sinker mostly and a slider occasionally. He doesn't throw a fastball because he doesn't have one, at least not by major league standards. "His fastball," Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds once joked, "has been timed at 27 miles per hour." Actually it once was timed at about 75 miles per hour, hardly fast enough to be arrested. Randy Jones doesn't need a fastball. With his sinker and slider, the Padres' 28-year-old left-hander gets groundouts instead of strikeouts. In becoming the major league's first 10-game winner this season, he had only 33 strikeouts. More important, he had issued only 15 walks prior to his anticipated duel with Tom Seaver of the New York Mets in San Diego last night. Tom Seaver possesses what Randy Jones wants—the Cy Young Award as the National League's outstanding pitcher.
"Not winning it last year was a big disappointment," Randy Jones has said. "I thought I did more for my team than Tom did for his. That's what I was counting on."
Most of the Scouts Disappeared
Tom Seaver had a 22-9 won-lost record last season. Randy Jones had a 20-12 record and led the league with a 2.24 earned-run average, all without an effective fastball.
"I had a fastball at Brea High School," the Californian remembers. "I threw hard enough to average about 15 strikeouts a game. But then I hurt my arm as a freshman at Chapman College in Los Angeles when I lost my balance on a pitch and something snapped. I had pulled some tendons. I wasn't that concerned about my future because I was going for a business degree in real estate, and if my arm didn't come back, it didn't come back. But it came back enough for me to pitch again in college and in Alaska in the summer for the Anchorage Glacier Pilots—we won the national semipro championship. I'd lost my fastball but I worked on my control. Most of the scouts disappeared after I hurt my arm, but a few stayed."
Among the few who stayed were Marty Keough and Cliff Ditto of the Padres' scouting staff.
"He threw strikes," Marty Keough says. "He got a quick breaking ball and he got people out."
Shortly after his 1972 college graduation, Randy Jones was drafted by the Padres in the fifth round. He pitched at Alexandria in the Texas League that summer, returned there the next year but soon joined the Padres after a total of only five months in the minors.

"Our minor league pitching instructor, Warren Hacker," he says, "had taught me how to throw a better sinker. He showed me how to place my fingers differently and how to apply pressure with them."
That sinker has enabled Randy Jones to develop what Peter Bavasi, the Padres general manager, describes as a unique strike zone—"from the top of the batter's kneecap to the bottom of his kneecap." That sinker also is the best that Roger Craig has seen in more than two decades as a pitcher and coach in the major leagues.
"It's even better than Clem Labine's sinker," says Craig, referring to his one-time Brooklyn Dodger teammate. "It sinks more and it sinks later."
Only 68 Pitches
Roger Craig estimates that Randy Jones's sinker breaks down from five to 10 inches and breaks away up to six inches from a right-handed batter. Out of every 10 pitches, Randy Jones will throw his sinker six or seven times, his slider the other three or four. Against right-handed batters, he prefers to keep his sinker outside, then come inside with his slider. Against left-handed batters, he usually throws both pitches outside, but occasionally surprises them inside.
"His slider has a bigger break than most sliders," Roger Craig says, "and it breaks real late. On a right-handed batter, it will break in about six inches and down about four inches. And sharp. But the big thing about Randy Jones is that he's usually got amazing control. He works in a groove with beautiful rhythm."
He also works quickly. Last season Randy Jones needed only 68 pitches to shut out the Pittsburgh Pirates and he disposed of the Houston Astros in 97 minutes. He literally had hitters talking to themselves. The hitters had remembered him as a 22-game loser in the 1974 season with a 4.45 earned-run average.
"I remember Pete Rose saying, 'Throw the ball, throw it harder,'" says Fred Kendall, the Padres' catcher. "Randy had him crazy."
Most hitters prefer to swing at a fastball. It's easier to time a fastball than it is to time a deceptive sinker or slider.
"Another time," Kendall says, "Pete yelled, 'We'll let you move in closer if you want to, but throw hard, damn it, throw hard.'"
Not this season. The National League hitters have been as silent as their bats. They know Randy Jones doesn't need a fastball.

Perry Still Sharp In Beating Orioles

By AL HARVIN

Gaylord Perry is still sharp after all his years in the game. Last night the 37-year-old right-hander, in his 15th season in the majors, scattered four hits while leading Texas to a 4-1 victory over Baltimore and completing a four-game sweep of the Orioles by the Rangers.

Perry walked only two and struck out nine Orioles, moving himself within one strikeout of tying Bob Feller for seventh place on his career streak list and three from tying Warren Spahn for sixth place. He pitched his worst game to date for the season.

Perry's performance gave him 53 strikeouts for the season and a career total of 2,119.

Dallas Williams made his Yankee Stadium debut yesterday but the Baltimore Orioles are confident it won't be his only appearance at the refurbished Bronx ball park.

Williams, an 18-year-old senior at Abraham Lincoln High School in Brooklyn, was selected by the Orioles in the first round of Tuesday's free agent draft. Yesterday his presence in the Lincoln Athletic League championship game at the Stadium against Christopher Columbus High of The Bronx drew a good audience, including 21 members of his large family.

The 5-foot-10-inch, 165-pound center fielder, who batted .492 and won five of six starts as a pitcher this season, failed to hit in two official trips to the plate, but scored twice after drawing a walk and being hit by a pitch.

That caused John Stokoe, a Baltimore scout, a few anxious moments, but he felt better when Williams jogged to first base.

After spotting Columbus a first-inning run, Lincoln came back with nine runs over the next five innings to prevail 9-1. For Joe Malone, the Lincoln coach, the title was his second straight—with a 20-year gap in between.

"I had to take over this year," Malone, 42, said, "when Herh Isaacson, our head man for many years, gave up coaching before the season. The last time I coached baseball was in 1956 when I was a student teacher at Lincoln and we surprised everyone by winning the championship," said Malone, the acting chairman of the Lincoln Health Education Department.

Williams, rubbing ice on the swelling on his shin bone where he was struck by the pitcher, said that he was nervous only the first time he came to bat.

"I felt the pressure then," the youngster said, "but after that it was like any other game."

An excellent fielder with a strong throwing arm and good speed, Williams had only one opportunity to display these attributes when he made an over-the-shoulder catch of a long drive in the first inning when Columbus scored its only run and threatened to score more.

"Actually I lost the ball in the stands and sky," he said, "and I just managed to catch up to it at the last moment."

Three other Lincoln players impressed the scouts in the stands: Pedro Nicasio smacked a 325-foot home run (the only one of the contest); Mike Todisco had three hits and batted in three runs; and Phil Dierma, a left-hander, pitched a four-hitter for his sixth victory in an undefeated season.

Williams, however, was the main attraction.

ers out again and they cheered when Martin bounced out to argue. The ensuing argument, however, was deleted. Perhaps it was X-rated. Catfish Hunter, on the other hand, was pitching an AAA-rated game until the eighth. He latered after Dick Williams, the Angel manager, used five pitchers in an interminable seventh in which the Yankees scored two runs.

The Yankees scored their first run in the sixth on a triple by Rivers and Roy White's single.

Crosby started the seventh with a single and Graig Nettles doubled him to third. That ended Don Kierwood's night. Mickey Scott relieved the starter, threw four pitches, all balls, to Gamble, and he was finished for the night.

Dick Drago became the third Angel pitcher and he lasted long enough to give up a run-scoring, infield single to Willie Randolph and relieve Jim Mason on a pop fly. Andy Hassler then relieved Drago and Rivers hit Hassler's first pitch for a run-scoring fly to left field. Hassler then walked White, reloading the bases, and he was replaced by Paul Hartzell, who ended the nonsense with one pitch to Thurston Munson, which he lofted to right field.

could do nothing last night. Bosclair won a start in right field after two weeks of heroics coming off the bench, and went 0 for 4. Before the evening began, he had had eight hits in his last 12 times at bat, and had eight hits in 11 attempts this season as a pinch-hitter.

For Freisleben, a 24-year-old right-hander, it was his third shutout and fourth victory since being recalled from Hawaii in the Pacific Coast League 15 days ago.

Apodaca gave up a long sacrifice fly to Dave Winfield for the second run. The third came in the eighth off Rick Baldwin on Winfield's single, a stolen base, an outfield fly and Mike Ivie's single. Thus, while the Padres had only five hits for the evening, three of them became runs and two of them drove in runs.

The Mets had no comparable success with their three hits off Freisleben. Felix Millard lined out and Lolich tapped out with a runner on third in the fifth inning, Ed Kranepool struck out with runners on first and second to end the seventh inning, and Del Unser flied out with runners on second and third in the eighth to cancel the other brace.

EXIMBANK MAPS NEW SET OF RULES

Government-Helped Export Credits Are Affected in Big Industrial Nations

By EDWIN L. DALE Jr.
WASHINGTON, June 9—The Export-Import Bank announced today a new set of international rules for government-assisted export credits that the other leading industrial nations are expected to follow.

In an unusual procedure, the Eximbank made its announcement unilaterally, with the understanding that its counterparts in Europe and Japan will make similar statements before the end of the month.

They cover minimum interest rates, maximum repayment periods and down payments by the foreign borrower. While the goal of the new rules is to reduce "counterproductive competition" in export credit terms, they do not cover all aspects of government-aided export credit.

Terms Slightly Changed
The Eximbank's own lending terms will be affected only very slightly, mainly through an increase from 10 percent to 15 percent in the down payment required on export credit deals.

Although conceding that the new rules do not cover all kinds of aids to exports, Mr. Dubrul said that "we must walk before we run, and this is an important first step."

New Rules Outlined
Apart from the new minimum down payment of 15 percent, the new rules have these features:

For credits of more than five years, the minimum interest rate will be 8 percent for credits to "highly developed" countries, 7 1/2 percent to "intermediate" countries and 7 percent to "less developed" countries.

The maximum term will be 10 years to less developed countries and 8 1/2 years to other countries.

French paid a little over $4 million.

Although there has been no announcement from the Swiss authorities, it is understood that the Swiss National Bank acquired roughly the same amount as the French.

Altogether 780,000 ounces brought $92 million at the auction, the first of 16 to be held in the next two years to raise money for a fund to help developing countries.

The L.M.F. did not release the names of the bidders. But reports from Washington, confirmed by European sources, showed that almost all the gold was taken by European institutions.

The Bank for International Settlements in Basel, which acts as a forum for many central banks of the world, acquired about one-fifth of the total.

Pound at $1.7744 As 2 Central Banks Stabilize Currency

LONDON, June 9 (AP)—The British and Swiss central banks successfully stabilized the pound today in keeping with a renewed effort by international monetary authorities to prevent excessive swings in the foreign-exchange market.

The pound rose to $1.7744 from $1.77 yesterday as the Bank of England stepped up its intervention to what appeared to be the highest amount in many weeks.

The dollars ended at 2.5035 Swiss francs, compared with 2.4995 late yesterday and recovered to 2.5675 West German marks late in the day for only a small loss from 2.5692 late yesterday.

Most other movements in Europe's foreign exchange markets were small. However, the dollar rose substantially against the lira to $54.75 from $50.00 yesterday.

Nevertheless, the dollar was little changed against the French franc at 4.73, compared with 4.7340 and against the Dutch guilder at 2.7280, compared with 2.7285.

"bailing out" Litton—an allegation already made in Congressional quarters. Under the new cost escalation formula, Litton would receive about $240 million, and on the basis of its earlier estimated loss of $207 million, would have made a profit of about $22 million, according to Mr. Clements.

These calculations have been completely upset by Litton's new loss estimate of $544 million, and Defense officials see no way to close the gap through rewriting the contract with a revised cost escalation formula.

Objections in the proposed settlement also were reported to have been raised by the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Company, a subsidiary of Tenneco Inc. Newport News Shipbuilding, which faces an estimated loss of $127 million on six contracts for 16 nuclear-powered ships and submarines, has filed claims for $894 million against the Navy.

Under the contractual settlement proposed by the Defense Department, Newport News would make a profit estimated by Mr. Clements at $32 million. Defense officials reported that Newport News Shipbuilding officials had protested that under the proposed settlement the shipyard would get insufficient money, particularly to fulfill assurances given to the parent company and stockholders that the subsidiary would come out of its shipbuilding contracts with the Navy in good financial condition. The Electric Boat division of the General Dynamics Corporation was said to be the only shipyard willing to accept the settlement proposed by the Defense Department. Electric the United States about the dangers of nuclear plants and radioactive waste. The "Yes on 15 Committee" spent about $1 million.

Mr. Levine added, "Our constituency won't go away. We'll watch the Legislature and the State Energy Commission. We'll be ready to go back on the ballot in California, if necessary."

A similar initiative is scheduled for Oregon this fall. An observer noted that there was a "mood of general satisfaction, but no shouting" at the Fairmont Hotel here, where power companies executives had gathered for the 44th annual convention of the Edison Electric Institute.

Largest Contribution Sherman L. Sibley, chairman of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, which had put $431,881 into the opposition campaign as of May 29, the largest company contribution, said he was "very pleased that Californians gave safe nuclear power a go-ahead," but declined to comment further. Most observers here felt that the passage last week of a package of three bills that place less severe restrictions on nuclear power development than Proposition 13 contributed to the defeat of the initiative, which had confused many voters because of its complex wording.

One-Year Moratorium

The three bills prohibit construction of new nuclear power plants until waste disposal and reprocessing methods are approved by the Legislature. Additionally, a one-year moratorium on new plants goes into effect while the state's Energy Commission studies placing nuclear reactors deep in the earth. Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said, in signing the bills, "They will go a long way toward meeting the concerns the people have" about nuclear energy. He declined to take a stand on the initiative. Robert E. Morris, president of the San Diego Gas and Electric Company, a company that opposed the bills, now said the focus of his attention will shift toward "the administration of the bills." "We will live with them," he added. However, Mr. Morris would not rule out the possibility of court challenges to the bills on the grounds that Federal law may pre-empt any state action to regulate atomic energy. "At this time I want to leave all my options open," he said.

Largest Capacity

Gordon R. Corey, vice president of the Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago, said he was "pleased—very much so," about the outcome, noting that his company has the largest nuclear capacity in the United States—5.5 million kilowatts. Mr. Corey noted that the electrical power industry currently contemplated $650 billion of construction over the next 15 years and that $400 billion of that had to be raised by outside financing.

Alphonse H. Aymond, chairman of the Consumers Power Company of Jackson, Mich., a company involved in "major litigation," over the underperformance of its Fallis nuclear plant, said he was certain had no current plans for any more construction because of "financing difficulties."

Robert T. Person, chief executive officer of the Public Service Company of Colorado, said he thought that the defeat of Proposition 13 would help the pro-nuclear forces in a similar initiative campaign that will be held in Colorado in November.

Carl Walske, president of the Atomic Industrial Forum, a trade group that has been instrumental in coordinating publicity favoring nuclear development, said, "We have a lot of work ahead of us. We'll have to repeat this in every other state where there's a vote and carry our message to the state houses. A campaign like the one in California introduces doubts and fears. We can't rest on our laurels."

Venezuela Plans Shift in Oil

CARACAS, Venezuela, June 9 (AP)—The Venezuelan Government is working on a series of measures aimed at correcting multimillion-dollar book losses expected to be reported this year by 14 state oil companies, Finance Minister Hector Hurtado said here today.

Government officials estimate the national oil companies are likely to report book losses this year of between $460 million and $680 million.

Mr. Hurtado indicated that the measures being worked out would involve elimination of the special exchange rate for the so-called "oil-dollar" as well as an adjustment in the income tax structure applied to the oil industry.

The 14 state operating units functioning under the state building company, Petroleos de Venezuela, replaced more than 30 foreign-owned oil companies last Jan. 1 when the country's oil industry was nationalized.

Personal Finance: 'Payable-Through' Drafts bank acts only as a collector when the draft is presented. The corporation drawing the draft therefore does not have to cover its obligation by allocating funds until it is specifically requested to do so by the collecting bank.

One result, of course, is that companies using such drafts have the use of their funds for longer periods. And banks, in turn, have the money for shorter periods.

As the New York State Commercial Code says: "An instrument which states that it is 'payable through' a bank or the like designates that bank as a collecting bank to make presentment, but does not of itself authorize that bank to pay the instrument."

The most frequent users of "payable-through" drafts are insurance companies, particularly life and health insurers, for the payment of claims. Since these claim payments are often written by agents or adjusters in the field—and sometimes by corporate personnel departments in the case of group policies—a single checking account for all payments from that company would be unwieldy.

In addition, the home office of the company has an opportunity to review the settlement agreed to in the field before approving the release of the funds. In those instances where it feels that the amount is excessive or otherwise inappropriate, it can refuse to allow the money to be released.

Thus, in contrast to the normal electronic processing of a check through the Federal Reserve System—whereby payment is usually made within a few days—the processing of a "payable-through" draft can take up to 10 working days. It is typically mailed "for collection" by the presenting bank to the bank through which it is payable, which then sends it to the issuer, who must approve it for payment. After approval is given, the bank generally issues a cashier's check to the presenting bank and again sends it through the mails.

The person receiving the draft, however, cannot draw a check on or withdraw this money until the entire procedure has been completed—unless the collecting bank permits him to do so as a courtesy. Many recipients, under the impression that they have received a regular check, cannot understand the reason for the delay and press for payment.

"Did you ever send one of these items for collection?" asked R. P. Dick, executive vice president of the Oxford Savings Bank in Oxford, Mich. "It takes a minimum of two weeks to get payment and, in the meantime, your customer is phoning you every day."

Recipients of "payable-through" drafts may also find special charges tacked on by the presenting banks, the banks through which the drafts are paid or both for servicing the transaction. Such a charge could be as much as $7.50 from each of the two banks involved.

If you receive a "payable-through" draft in settlement of a claim, there is little that you can do to speed up payment. But you should be aware that it may take longer than expected to collect the funds, so don't spend the money until you have it.

Increase in Prices Of 8 to 23% Listed By British Steel

The British Steel Corporation announced in London yesterday that it would increase prices 8 to 23 percent on a number of products, effective July 4.

The increases apply to carbon billets and related products, plates and rails, electrical sheets, alloy steel billets and derived products, stainless steel billets and related products, plus stainless flat products and foundry pig iron.

The increases reflect the need to recover rises in costs of imported raw materials, fuel and scrap, the company said. It added that the last increase in April did not fully reflect the British inflation at that time.

The price increases announced by United States companies recently have amounted to 7 to 8 percent for structural steel, while those for cold-rolled steel, such as sheet and strip, were 6 percent.

The minimum price for platinum of the Rustenburg Platinum Mines Ltd. had been increased to $165 an ounce from $155, Johnson Matthey & Company announced in London yesterday. It noted that Rustenburg's prices for other platinum group metals were not being changed. The Sun Company has raised the retail price of gasoline by 1 cent a gallon at company-owned stations. The move follows similar increases announced in the last few weeks by other major companies. The nationwide average retail price of a gallon of regular grade gasoline at full service stations is about 57.5 cents, and about 3 cents less at self-service stations.

The Monsanto Textiles Company, a unit of the Monsanto Company, has increased the prices of a wide range of acrylic staple and tow products for apparel and home furnishings end uses by 5 to 9 cents a pound, effective with shipments on July 5. The Monsanto Polymers & Petrochemicals Company unit is raising the price of methanol 2 cents a gallon and 37 percent formaldehyde methanol free 0.35 cents a pound effective July 1.

PPG Industries said it was increasing the price of methylene chloride effective July 1 and of tri-ethane solvent stabilized and trichloroethane effective Aug. 1. Methylene chloride will go up 1 cent a pound. Consumer bulk prices for tri-ethane solvent will rise to $2.38 a gallon from $2.27. Specialty grades will continue to carry a premium of 10 cents a gallon and drum prices will remain 4 cents a pound over bulk prices.

As a side ash, the company is raising schedule prices about $4 a ton immediately on spot sales and as permissible on contracts.

Corporation Affairs G.M. to Defer Payments For Wankel Licensing

The General Motors Corporation announced yesterday that it would defer future payments for the world-wide licensing rights to the ill-fated Wankel rotary engine unless it put into production. The announcement was the latest indication that G.M., which has already paid $38 million for rights to the engine, may never manufacture it.

General Motors shelved its rotary engine plans indefinitely two years ago because of poor fuel economy and high exhaust emission problems. The rotary engine six years ago was called a revolutionary breakthrough that eventually might replace the piston engine's splicing as the conventional power plant for cars. The stock of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, which has the North American license for the rotary engine, climbed from 10 1/2 in 1970 to 18 1/2, mostly because of the possibilities foreseen for the rotary engine.

Under the arrangement announced yesterday by General Motors, it would pay a maximum of $17 million if the engines were used in its own vehicles or up to $20 million if it sold the engines to other manufacturers. In any event, the license becomes fully paid on Dec. 31, 1980, whether the rotary goes into production or not. Thus, General Motors would acquire rights to the engine at a saving of $12 million if it is never manufactured. Some observers estimate that General Motors has already spent more than $100 million on the rotary engine license and development work.

Hudson Bay Unit Announces Oil Find The Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company announced that Trend Exploration, a unit of Hudson Bay's Francona Oil and Gas subsidiary, had made an oil discovery in Irian Jaya, Indonesia, in association with Pertamina, the Indonesian Government-owned oil company.

The Republic of Texas Corporation, a bank holding company, registered $75 million of 25-year debentures to be sold by a Blyth Eastman Dillon-Salomon Brothers group. The Northern Illinois Gas Company filed $50 million of 25-year bonds to be sold at competitive bidding July 8. The Anchor Hocking Corporation said it would sell $45 million of 30-year debentures through Dillon Read & Company and its associates.

company's equity. Sibec, a Quebec government-owned steel producer, will have a 30.1 percent interest and the Quebec Cartier Mining Company an 8.23 percent interest. The development involves a new mine at Fire Lake, Quebec, that will have an annual output of 14 million tons of iron ore. Two pelletizing lines with a capacity of 6 million tons a year will be established at Port Cartier, about 400 miles from Quebec City.

Caterpillar Declares 37 1/2-Cent Dividend Directors of the Caterpillar Tractor Company have declared a quarterly dividend of 37 1/2 cents on the new common stock, payable Aug. 30 to holders of record Aug. 5. The company said a previously announced 3-for-2 stock split was distributed to shareholders if approved through stockholder letters of consent. The last day for receipts of consent is June 21. Distribution of the additional shares is expected in July. The new 37 1/2-cent dividend is equivalent to 56 1/2 cents paid in May, which was raised from 50 cents last February.

Celanese to Expand The Celanese Chemical Company, a unit of the Celanese Corporation, said it planned to build a new oxobutyraldehyde-butanol unit with an annual capacity of 150 million pounds at its Bay City, Tex., plant. Construction of the new unit will start in late 1976 with completion scheduled for mid-1978.

Continental Oil Plea Howard W. Blauvelt, chairman of the Continental Oil Company, said yesterday after studying the indicting charging price fixing issued last week by a Federal grand jury against Continental and its Kayo subsidiary that the companies would plead not guilty to the charges. He said Continental and Kayo would "vigorously contest" the charges.

Westinghouse Line The Westinghouse Electric Corporation has introduced a new line of energy-saving electric motors and a new computer numerical control line. The company said it had not yet decided on prices for the new electric motor line. Prices for the new computer numerical control line will range from $15,500 to $28,000.

Dow Jones Listing Dow Jones & Company, announced it had applied for listing of its common shares on the New York Stock Exchange. The publishing company's shares are now traded in the over-the-counter market. The company, which went public in 1963, has about 4,700 shareholders and 15,891,655 common shares issued and outstanding.

Star Expects Loss For Fiscal 1976 The Starr Broadcasting Group announced it expected to report a net loss for fiscal 1976 ending June 30 because of write-downs of its investment basis in certain non-broadcast properties, a result of the reassessment of asset value.

AMEX PRICES OFF AS VOLUME FALLS

Market-Value Index Down 0.03—O-T-C Also Drops

By ALEXANDER R. HAMMER Investor concern over the Lebanese situation and increasing interest rates depressed prices yesterday on the American Stock Exchange and in the over-the-counter market. The Amex market-value index closed off 0.03 at 101.43 with declines outscoring advances by 311 to 282. The average price of a share was unchanged. Volume dropped to 1.79 million shares from 2.24 million on Tuesday.

Trading in Amex issues, including regional exchanges and the over-the-counter market, fell to 1.88 million shares from 2.43 million on Tuesday. In the counter market, the NASDAQ industrial index fell 0.24 to 92.73 while the composite index lost 0.17 to 86.95. Losing issues outnumbered those that gained by 383 to 318. Turnover fell to $3.35 billion from $4.59 billion the day before.

New Mexico and Arizona Land moved ahead 3/4 to 17 1/2. The company yesterday signed an uranium exploration option contract on 725,000 acres of land in northern Arizona. Leigh Products advanced 3/4 to 10 1/2. The company reported that its second-quarter profits climbed to 67 cents a share from 28 cents in the year-ago period.

Crutcher Resources slipped 1/2 to 7 1/2. Crutcher-Rolls-Cummings, a private holding company with 65 percent of the voting stock of Crutcher Resources, announced plans to sell its holdings in Crutcher Resources for $24 million. Among the losers, Miller-Wohl tumbled 3/4 to 34. Edo Corporation, 1 to 9 1/2, and Globe Industries, 1/2 to 12 1/2.

LOEWS DISCLOSES PAYOFFS ABROAD

Loews declined to identify the foreign countries where the questionable payments were made, and it declined to identify the executives who were involved in the domestic political contributions. A company lawyer said no comment would be made beyond the statement. Loews said it had advised the Internal Revenue Service that it would correct its income tax returns to the extent that any deductions were improper.

The company did not state the amount of the expected loss. It said its results from operation before accounting for the write-downs were expected to show a "substantial improvement" from a year earlier when the company reported a loss of $2.1 million. Starr also said it had completed the sale of New York radio station WNCN-FM to the GAF Corporation for $2.2 million. Starr said about $1.8 million of the sale proceeds would be used to satisfy accrued interest and reduce principal requirements on outstanding long-term debt of the station. The rest of the sale proceeds will be utilized for working capital and for costs incurred in connection with the sale.

Burnside Tells of Payments The Burnside Corporation announced yesterday that an investigation covering the five-year period starting with 1971 had disclosed that improper payments totaling $155,000 were made by three of its 13 foreign affiliates. The payments were made to purchasing agents and clerical employees of government-controlled companies, customs officials and minor municipal employees in violation of local law. One foreign affiliate maintained a special account from which $65,000 of these payments were made during the five years.

The company, which manufactures electrical connectors, also said that a transfer of $100,000 from one foreign affiliate to another was made in violation of local currency-exchange laws. Burnside did not identify the foreign affiliates.

Reserve Outlines Rules to Block Redlining by Mortgage Lenders

Mr. Jackson said: "The thrust of the law is to inform the public. The statute says that the institutions must fill out the forms, and that's all that's specifically required." Roger S. Kuhn, a lawyer for the Center for National Policy, said he would sue with Mr. Jackson. The center, along with other civil rights and public groups, has sued the Fed and other leading regulatory agencies for failing to enforce the civil rights of minorities and women who allegedly suffer from discrimination in receiving loans.

Asked for his reaction to the new Fed regulation, an executive of a large New York lending institution who did not want to be identified, said: "The law will do some good undoubtedly, but it will not prove earth shattering. I don't think it will do much to remedy the situation in the worst areas, even though it might tend to put the bank on the spot as to where their mortgage loans are placed."

size of the increase. The "price protection" letters guarantee dealers that they can write orders for 1977 models and know that if the price is more than 6 percent higher than the comparable 1976 model, they won't have to pay the difference.

Similar letters from G.M.'s Chevrolet and GMC Truck and Coach divisions went to those dealers in recent days. They were told they could begin immediately taking orders on any light, medium or heavy duty G.M. built 1977 model truck.

Ford also told dealers to calculate a 6 percent increase in optional equipment as well as in the base vehicle. G.M. said its 6 percent figure applied to the base vehicle, and the final delivered price could still be affected by changes in optional equipment, shipping charges and Government regulations. Many 1976 lines of cars and trucks are in short supply now because of booming sales. The industry has only a 51-day supply of cars and trucks on hand, in some popular lines. An average stock pile is 60 days.

S.E.C. INVITES IDEAS ON JUDGING DISPUTES

WASHINGTON, June 9—The Securities and Exchange Commission invited suggestions today on how to carry out its recently announced proposal to set up a mechanism for settling disputes between brokers and their customers. The grievance procedure would operate much like small-claims court in providing efficient and economical disposition of cases. Comments, which should be received by the commission by June 28, were specifically sought on nine issues, including these: The practicality of making the system available to investors in all cities with a population of more than 100,000; whether either party should be permitted to be represented by a lawyer; whether the system should be restricted to claims below a stated dollar amount, such as $300 or $1,000; how the procedure would be integrated with existing arbitration methods; and who would pay the costs. A public meeting will be held here on the program on July 7.

POLICY SPURS RIFT OF BANKS, BROKERS

Discussing Congressional activity to revamp banking legislation, the S.I.A. report asserted that banks were "using existing loopholes in the laws to expand into the securities business despite lack of favorable legislation." The report noted that a number of banks were already offering "brokerage-related" services, while the Chemical Bank of New York was planning to go into the brokerage business in a major way.

The First National Bank of Chicago, the report added, is "aggressively advertising venture-capital, private-placement and long-term corporate finance services."

Stockholdings Of Insiders

The American Stock Exchange issued yesterday its latest report of changes in stock ownership by leading stockholders, directors and officers of the listed companies. The New York Stock Exchange did not make such a list available yesterday.

Advertising TV Commercial Costs Defended

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY Ad agencies and their clients are truly singing the blues these days about the soaring cost of television commercial time, especially in the fourth quarter. Some media people are accusing the stations of excessive greed. Others are exploring alternative media. "They should spend more time forecasting the business and less time grousing about it," says Stephen D. Seymour vice president corporate TV sales of the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company and president to TVAR, the national advertising rep for its five stations. He warned agencies a year ago about the sellers market that was shaping up. But did they listen?

Now, Mr. Seymour says, "I guess you can expect the complaints, but what I want to prevent is people leaving spot television under the guise that spot is gouging them, using and abusing them. The shoe is just on the other foot and they don't like it." In order to put the high prices in perspective, the 34-year-old son of Dan Seymour, former chairman of J. Walter Thompson, has just sent out another letter to his friends at the agencies that attempts to prove that spot TV costs have not increased so much since 1968 as a lot of other things. A six-pack of Coke, for example, increased 79 percent and a Chevrolet Impala 53 percent. A five-station buy for Group W's early news is up 28.2 percent. That comparison with 1968 is a good idea, because a comparison with 1973 would be devastating.

That's because 1973 marked the comeback year of pricing for spot time, which started dropping with the cigarette advertising ban in 1971 that increased the inventory. Part of problems out there in spot land rest with the spot buyers at agencies who, according to Mr. Seymour, "pick the known hits and are unaccustomed to finding alternative methods of reaching the same audience." Those are the exact sentiments of Gerald Muldering, vice president of WPX, who said, "many agencies have ignored alternative values on the independent stations." Frequently spot buyers are among the most recent employees at an agency, and Mr. Seymour said, "Spot media departments don't have the status they deserve." He also noted that some agencies had been cutting back on top media planners and researchers, a situation that has added to station woes. The Group W stations are WBZ-TV, Boston; KYW-TV, Philadelphia; WJZ, Baltimore; KTV, San Francisco, and KDKA-TV, Pittsburgh. And, by the way, advertisers should be of good heart. Mr. Seymour, the able forecaster, does not look for a continuation of the price curve of the last 18 months. From here on out they should follow normal inflationary processes," he said. So much for the good news.

Delivering Time It won't be long before Time Inc. is delivering its portion of its $20 million magazine a year through systems other than the United States Postal Service. Arthur W. Keylor, its group vice president for magazines, told a Chicago audience yesterday. He told the Society of National Association of Publications that the alternative delivery methods being tested by his company could possibly be at a break-even point compared with postal rates by this summer. Mr. Keylor also noted in his remarks that the readers of his magazines were being asked to carry more of the costs and that circulation revenues, which were 29 percent of total revenues just a few years ago, were expected to be about 40 percent this year. Elsewhere in publishing, Skeptic magazine, which has done without advertising since its founding in 1974, asked its readers which they preferred, increased subscrip-

Clyne President Forecasts Gains

Henry Kornhauser is happy as a clam, but more talkative. The C. T. Clyne Company of which he is president and chief operating officer billed $32.6 million last year according to Advertising Age and is currently billing at the rate of $46 million. He says that he expects to be adding two or three major companies to the client roster within the next 90 days. He calls the company "our dream agency" and has nothing but nice things to say about the workers who toil far into the night and on holidays to create what he chooses to call "Urgency to Buy" advertising. "That's what makes us different—the hard work," he said. "And, we work closely with our clients. We've got 25 new products in test market, and half were our ideas. We don't charge the clients. We earn our way, and it pays off."

Having worked at a couple of large agencies, usually on owner-financed accounts, Mr. Kornhauser joined Phil Dusenberry to become president of Dusenberry, Ruriani, Kornhauser a few years back. Two years ago that shop was acquired by Clyne. Of C. Terence Clyne, the chairman, the president comments, "We look different. I'm short and fat, and he's tall and thin, but we think a lot the same. As a business team, we're awfully good." In police circles they'd call it a Mutt and Jeff team.

Encouraging Handy Folk Abe Lebewohl may be great at running a kosher restaurant, but he's not handy. And he's always being reminded of it, too, as things break down either around the house or at the Second Avenue Delicatessen Restaurant. Recently he decided to do a little something to encourage handy people to become handier. That's the story behind the small space ad in yesterday's New York Times and New York Post announcing Mr. Lebewohl's offer of a $3 gift certificate for his restaurant for any trade or technical school student with proof of a 90-or-above average.

Election Year Special Smith/Greenland, which has done a top job of making Johnnie Walker Black Label Scotch advertising with snob appeal, is continuing its efforts with a particularly timely and topical entry for the Presidential election year.

The new ad shows a picture of the nation's Capitol building all dressed up for a Presidential inaugural and a crowd in front. The single line of copy is, "In America, anyone can grow up to deserve Johnnie Walker Black Label."

Agencies to Merge Effective July 1, Ferber, Straus, Glass will acquire the Wilsted & Schachter Agency, and Fred Schacter, W. & S. president, will become a vice president. Both agencies are largely in soft goods with Ferber, Straus billing about $5 million and Wilsted & Schacter about $500,000.

Federated and Saks Fined On Price-Fixing Charges

Federated Department Stores and Saks & Company, parent concerns of I. Magnin & Company and Saks Fifth Avenue, respectively, were each fined a maximum $50,000 yesterday in Federal District Court, San Francisco, after company attorneys filed pleas of no contest to charges of conspiring to fix prices. Last April, a Federal grand jury indicted both companies on charges that they had fixed prices on women's apparel in northern California between 1963 and April 1974.

Savings Banks in State Post Net Deposit Inflows for May

The savings banks of New York State had a net deposit inflow of $293 million in May, the Savings Bank Association of New York reported yesterday. This was up from the April inflow of $261 million but well below the $470 million gain a year earlier. At the end of May, deposits in the state's 118 savings banks were $63.2 billion, up from $57.3 billion a year ago.

Energy Reserves Asks List Be Kept From Rittenberry

By HERBERT KOSHEZ

The Energy Reserves Group, formerly the Clinton Oil Company, filed a complaint yesterday in the Federal District Court in Wichita, Kan. seeking to enjoin C. R. Rittenberry and Associates of Tulsa, Okla., from interfering with the company's reorganization under the courts' jurisdiction.

Energy Reserves said it intends to make a takeover bid. To Tulsa, a spokesman for Rittenberry said his company had filed suit in the Delaware Chancery Court for access to the Energy Reserves list of shareholders. Energy Reserves has 44,000 shareholders who own 48,990,000 shares outstanding.

Energy Reserves is under court supervision in a reorganization that resulted from a 1973 complaint alleging mismanagement and violations of federal securities laws. In a letter to Energy Reserves management, Rittenberry said he wanted the shareholder list to assist Rittenberry in coordinating with shareholders for the purpose of offering to purchase shares or to present other proposals.

On the over-the-counter market, Energy Reserves yesterday was quoted at 1 3/4 asked and 1 1/2 bid.

The company in 1975 reported a net income of $9.7 million on revenues of $88 million.

The Crutcher Resources Corporation of Houston will be sold for $34 million to a private investment group. It was announced yesterday by Crutcher-Rolls-Cummings Inc., its parent.

Crutcher Resources makes equipment used in construction pipelines, including automatic welding equipment. In 1975, it reported a net income of $5 million on sales of $36.5 million.

The Associated Dry Goods Corporation and Stephens, Inc. yesterday confirmed published reports that Stephens, a Little Rock, Ark., investment banker, had agreed to purchase the stock of Ayr-Way discount stores, an Associated Dry Goods subsidiary.

A letter of intent signed by both companies calls for a definitive contract to be completed June 18. A Stephens affiliate will purchase all of Ayr-Way's outstanding stock at a price of $1.50 per share.

The water is still needed now but it will be later in the growing season.

Hot, Dry Weather In Midwest Keeps Grain Futures Up

By ELIZABETH M. FOWLER

Weather reports held the attention of traders at the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday. With the corn and soybean crops in midgrowth and needing moisture, weather trends are important.

Record high temperatures were reported in the Corn Belt yesterday and are expected to continue, but some forecasters indicated showers for Friday and Saturday.

These reports helped push still higher the prices of corn, soybeans and wheat on the Board of Trade. July soybeans closed at $6.27 a bushel, up 3 1/2 cents; July wheat gained a cent to close at $3.78 a bushel, and July corn closed at $3.06, up 4 cents a bushel.

Some buying strength came in reaction to a report that the French Government was holding meetings on drought indications.

Late buying occurred when a news service said dry weather was hurting Polish crops. This disclosure came a day after the Agriculture Department reported that Soviet crops had been affected by dry weather.

Wheat's closing price probably would have been higher except for the fact that some traders sold to take profit ahead of the Government report, issued after the end of trading.

Winter Wheat Crop Forecast Is Reduced but Remains Huge

It is estimating a 1976 crop of 1.4 billion bushels, compared with last year's crop of 1.5 billion bushels.

Although the Agriculture Department's grain and soybean forecasts indicate an enormous supply this year, today's cash markets were substantially higher than they were last year at this time.

Grain dealers at the Chicago Board of Trade attributed this to a stronger export demand than had been expected, especially for soybeans.

Unusually dry weather this spring in Minnesota was diminishing spring wheat and corn prospects there and could reduce that state's large soybean crop.

This, plus yesterday's Agriculture Department report of a reduction in the Soviet Union's winter wheat crop, held out the prospect of larger foreign demand for a slightly reduced supply of American wheat.

This, plus yesterday's Agriculture Department report of a reduction in the Soviet Union's winter wheat crop, held out the prospect of larger foreign demand for a slightly reduced supply of American wheat.

Other states' orange production estimates as of June 1 included: California, 50 million boxes, down 9 percent from last season; Arizona, 8.2 million, up 37 percent; and Texas, 6.4 million, up 41 percent.

CHASE MANHATTAN TO SHUT 2 BRANCHES

The Chase Manhattan Bank said yesterday that it would close two more branches this summer in a further effort to improve profitability.

One of two branches in Binghamton will close July 30, and one of two branches in Poughkeepsie will close later in the summer.

The bank said it was making studies to determine whether to close other unprofitable offices.

The bank said there would be no layoffs in connection with the closings. All the affected employees will be re-assigned to other Chase Manhattan branches.

There also is a political argument against the proposals. Wilbert A. Tatum, head of the Mayor's Office of Appraisal and Planning and Development and a task force member, put it this way:

"How can we, or anyone else, go to the Legislature and ask it to approve a program that is so one-sided in its benefits? The only way a program like this can go is if there is something in it for everybody. The argument that the poor will benefit by getting more jobs just won't fly."

A Company Evicted At Bronx Terminal Is Leaving the City

The Goodie Brand Packaging Corporation, leader of Insurgent merchants at the Bronx Terminal Market, announced yesterday that it would leave New York City, taking with it 100 jobs.

The announcement came a day after the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court refused to stay an eviction order obtained against Goodie by the Aroli Development Corporation, which operates the market under a lease from the city.

suspended himself as Democratic state chairman. Mr. Solomon predicted that at least four other merchants would follow him out of New York. He said they were negotiating with the City of York for industrial space.

"We have done everything in our power to stay in the Bronx and to stay in New York City," he said. "We are simply being thrown out. And Mayor Beame, who has expressed such interest in keeping jobs in New York City, has turned a deaf ear. I implore the Mayor to act at once."

City officials failed to respond to requests for comment. Last month they said they were reviewing their previous position defending the Aroli lease, and withdrew their assent to a 43.5 percent rent abatement to the operator.

Aroli, which could not be reached for comment, has not yet replied to the city's demand for more than $180,000 in rent arrears.

Since the 99-year lease was granted in 1972, Aroli has sharply increased rents and a number of substantial tenants left or were evicted.

Beame, in Attack on State, Bars Some Budget Cuts

"Zero," he said, gesturing toward charts that depicted the city teetering way down under $770 million in city taxes "acted by the state" and the state assuaging more comfortably above with a $271 million "state windfall."

"We haven't netted money," he said in an interview. "Not in the major categories. In the two biggest, education and revenue sharing, the city gets more this year than last, and for the other big one—the City University—the Governor has proposed ending the matching formula so that the state can increase its support."

Mr. Goldmark said that one lesson learned last year, "when the Legislature extended super-buman efforts to support the city," was that "our fetes are linked."

"It's not a matter of coming here and pleading for foreign aid," he said. "The city and the state have to trim their sails together."

Television cameras zoomed in on the graphics in the Mayor's carefully prepared report to an endorsement last week by the Governor of some harsh state criticism of Mr. Beame's austerity plans. The staff of the Emergency Financial Control Board had contended that the Mayor's budget-cutting plan was unrealistic in various areas—particularly in expecting the state to take over $127 million in annual court costs.

Accordingly, the Control Board's chief director, Stephen Berger, recommended that in the budget year beginning July 1 the city be forced to include $225 million in new and accelerated budget cuts, with $75 million more held in reserve. This is needed, Mr. Berger said, to make sure the city meets its goal of eliminating a $1 billion deficit from the budget in 1977-78.

Formal Reply Due

Mr. Beame is scheduled to offer a formal reply to the Control Board tomorrow, but he sought a two-day lead on this task in the public's mind with his news conference argument that so far the state had not helped the city with extra aid during the crisis.

The Mayor acknowledged that the state did advance $800 million in aid last two years

Text of Statement by Beame on Financial Situation

Following is the text of a statement by Mayor Beame on the city's fiscal situation:

In recent weeks you may have read or heard reports from state agencies which, in varying degrees, criticized the budget and the financial picture of the City of New York because it is, to quote the most recent E.F.C.B. [Emergency Financial Control Board] staff report, "unrealistic" in anticipating that the State of New York would assume some of the burden which the city has had to bear in areas that legitimately are state functions.

I want to take the next few minutes to talk to you about the responsibility of the State of New York to this city, and let you decide for yourself whether the state is meeting that responsibility.

The City of New York, battered by more than a year of worsening financial crises and economic erosion, accompanied by continuing cuts in manpower and services to our people, was offered the promise of a strong partnership with the state to see it through these difficult times.

The report also fails to point out that when Congress was debating the question of Federal help to the city, the House Banking Committee said that it was only right for the state to absorb up to 33 percent of the city deficit, while the Senate committee said the state's share of this deficit should rightly be 50 percent. Secretary of the Treasury Simon, in testimony before the Senate Banking Committee, also urged that the state pick up half of our operating deficit.

Yet, despite the intent of the Federal Government, the city-state "partnership" didn't work out that way.

Burden on Taxpayers

It may come as a shock to some of you, but the State of New York has not given one cent in additional aid over existing formulas to meet the city's fiscal crisis. The burden of the most crushing financial cataclysm in our city's history is being borne solely on the backs of New York City taxpayers.

Even more shocking is the fact that the Federal Government and the state government have both made substantial monetary gains out of this city's miseries. These windfalls came when we were forced to curtail programs and separate tens of thousands of city employees from the payroll, some of whom were paid for in part by Federal and state programs.

During the 1976 and 1977 fiscal years, the City of New York is producing $271 million in state budget windfalls as a result of our economies.

In return, the State of New York has not given the city one extra penny. Indeed, the state—either administratively or legislatively—has imposed upon our city still greater costs. These costs, including the city's new tax burden granted it by the state, total $888 million.

Weather Reports and Forecast

Summary

It will be mostly sunny throughout the Northeast today, although some scattered showers may develop in central and extreme northern New England. Showers and thundershowers will prevail in Florida, while fair skies will cover the rest of the eastern half of the country.

It will be hot in the Northeast and upper lake region, warm from the Eastern Seaboard to the Rockies and desert Southwest, and cool in the Pacific Northwest; seasonably mild temperatures will occur elsewhere. Showers will extend from the upper Missouri Valley to the Pacific Northwest and the eastern Great Basin; showers may also develop in the upper lake region and along the northern half of the California coast. Clear skies should cover the rest of the country.

Sunny skies and warm or hot temperatures occurred across most of the eastern third of the country yesterday. Showers and occasional thundershowers developed from southern New England through the lake region into the central Dakotas, while thundershowers scattered in southern Florida. Light showers occurred in the Texas panhandle, while scattered thundershowers were reported in extreme southern Texas. Additional precipitation was limited to rain along the Pacific Coast from southern Oregon to northern California. Elsewhere sunny weather prevailed.

Teacher Strike of '75 May Cost New York $20 Million in Aid

By LEONARD BUDEK

Last fall's five-day strike by teachers could cost the financially hard-pressed New York City school system an unexpected loss of $20 million to state aid next year, according to calculations by city school authorities.

State aid is based in part on a school system's average daily pupil attendance. During last fall's strike by teachers, most of the system's more than one million pupils missed classes for five days, missing a $20 million drop in state aid.

Dr. Bernard R. Gifford, the school system's deputy chancellor, said in a recent appeal to Governor Carey that unless the state enacted legislation to permit school districts to disregard strike days for state-aid purposes, students here would end up bearing an additional penalty for the strike.

Not only did the students lose school time because of the strike, he said, but they face the loss of educational opportunities next year because of the reduction in state aid.

Ironically, the strike last September gave the system a $30 million "windfall" which it used to keep on the payroll some 2,000 teachers who were slated for dismissal. The "savings" represented $15 million in salaries not paid to those on strike and another $15 million to matching penalties imposed under the state's Taylor Law, which prohibits strikes by public employees.

At the time the $30 million was earmarked to keep the 2,000 teachers on the payroll, there was no serious concern that the strike could wind up costing the city some state aid. Moreover, under the law, the strike windfall could not have been beyond the fiscal year and applied against future losses in funds.

Heretofore the custom had been for the Legislature to enact bills to spare school districts any loss of state aid after strikes. However, Governor Carey last year vetoed bills introduced in behalf of four upstate school districts, on the grounds that the possible loss of state aid could be an important inducement of the collective-bargaining process. At that time the Governor's vetoes attracted little attention here.

Another bill is now pending—this one introduced by State Senator Leon E. Gluffreda, a Long Island Republican—that would help New York City and the other districts that had teacher strikes. A spokesman for the Governor said yesterday to Albany that Mr. Carey had not yet taken any position on this bill.

In another development, Isaiah E. Robinson Jr., the president of the Board of Education, announced that the board was retaining the law firm of Proskauer, Rose, Getz & Mendelsohn of Manhattan "to enforce the school system's rights under the Stavisky-Goodman Law," which was enacted when the Legislature overrode a veto by Governor Carey.

The law requires the city to allocate approximately 21 percent of its expense budget to the Board of Education,

State Report Cites Savings in Welfare in New York City

A state report yesterday credited New York City with recent "significant achievements" in speeding up closings of welfare cases, but said that more savings of $10 million to $13 million a year could still be made.

In the study, Dr. Blanche Bernstein, deputy state commissioner of social services for income maintenance, said joint state and city efforts had cut the time to process case closings in city income-maintenance centers from 44 days last January and February to 30 days during April and May.

In employment centers, Dr. Bernstein said, the reduction was from 48 to 38 days, and in face-to-face certification centers, from 38 to 26 days. A study by her office calculated that the result meant $14.6 million to $17.1 million a year in savings, but said that the process could be further shortened to 21 to 23 days.

Herb Rosenzweig, the city's deputy human resources administrator for income maintenance programs, argued that the improvement had been even greater. Mr. Rosenzweig said the state report included about five days of delay from the time a case became ineligible for a change of status, even though this was not yet known to welfare officials.

Mr. Rosenzweig said that before a centralized processing-control unit started last year, the average delay before the closing procedures began was 75 days, to which required processing would add 20 to 25 days.

The state calculation, Mr. Rosenzweig said, is based on the assumption that the state will be able to speed up the processing of cases to 21 days.

Funny to go on a blind date as a divorcee. You get butterflies just like a teenager... wondering if he'll like you, your dress, your smile, your apartment and now a new wonderment...will he like your children (and they him?)
Fortunately I have a special friend to help me get the hang of divorcee-dating... a magazine! They say if I'll give about 80 per cent more than I expect to get back for a while and keep my sense of humor instead of being fussy and critical, I'll be okay. (Listen, that advice wouldn't have hurt when I was single the first time or when I was married). I love that magazine. I guess you could say I'm That COSMOPOLITAN Girl.

If you want to reach me you'll find me reading
